AN OUTGROWN IDEAL.

There have been some salutary changes during the long reign of Queen Victoria, one of which is casually treated by a London journal. Remarking that fainting was quite the fashion among women when her majesty came to the British throne, it says: "It was proper for an engaged young lady to swoon away if she received a letter containing the n:ews of her lover having sprained his leg. The queen was thought too insensible because her voice did not falter when she announced to the house of commons her engagement to Prince Albert. Consumptive heroines were best liked by novel readers. Girls took a pride in being in poor health. They used to talk of their ailments as they now talk of the bike and golf."
