Nervous and Debilitated.

Almost a Victim of Nervous Prostration—Was Restored to Health and Strength by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. D. W. Crossberry, 168 Richmond street west, Toronto, Ont., states: "My daughter, who sews in a white goods manufactory, got completely run down by the steady confinement and close attention required at her work. Her nerves were so exhausted, and she was so weak and debilitated, that she had to give up work entirely, and was almost a victim of nervous prostration. Hearing of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, she began to use it, and was benefitted from the very first. It proved an excellent remedy in restoring her to health and strength. After having used four boxes she is now at work again, healthy and happy, and attributes her recovery to the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food." As a blood builder and nerve restorative, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is of inestimable value. It makes the blood rich in red corpuscles, and the whole system healthy and vigorous. 50c a box—at all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Noxious Weeds.

MULLEIN, OR VELVET DOCK. The mullein is a weed introduced from Europe—very common in waste places, road sides, and gravelly or sandy pastures. It is a biennial, with long roots, from which spring a tall and usually unbranched stem, 2 to 6 feet high. Both stem and leaves are densely woolly all over, with branched hairs. The leaves are whitish, thick, and velvety to the touch. The flowers are yellow and arranged on densely crowded elongated spikes. The capsule containing the seeds is about 1 1/2 in. long, and the seeds are small, about 1-2 in. long, and sided, with irregular ridges running lengthwise between the sides. The color of the seeds is dark brown. An average plant produces 6,000 seeds.

Time of flowering, July-September. Time of seeding, August-November. Dispersal—as an impurity in clover and grass seed.

ERADICATION.—Spud or cut below the crown; or dig up the roots when young; or break up the soil and grow food crops. It easily succumbs to cultivation.

The Moth Mullein is a worse weed than the common mullein, as it infests meadows and bears far more seed. The seed is often found as an impurity in clover and timothy. The plant itself is smooth and slender, from 2 to 6 feet high, with dentate leaves. The flower is yellow, with brown marks on the back of the petals; and the stamens have long filaments. The seed is brown, very small, and 4-sided. Treat it the same as common mullein.

PLANTAIN, BLACK PLANTAIN, RIB-GRASS, OR RIB-WORT.

The plant was once very generally believed to be a favorite food of cattle, yet the opinion of agriculturists is against it. It is considered a bad weed, especially when it appears in lawns. Numerous inquiries ask what it is, and how to get rid of it. It is a root-stalk, or erect growth, or more generally lying on the ground as a rosette of leaves. At the base of the leaves there are several long, narrow, and tapering, prominent veins, or ribs running lengthwise, hence some of the popular names. The flower-stalk is slender and channelled, with a few leaves, and terminates in a dense spike. The stem projects from the inconspicuous flowers, giving a whitish appearance to the whole head. The seeds are enclosed in small pods, each containing two seeds. The seeds are about 1-12 of an inch long, brown and shiny, with a groove on one side, in the centre of which is a black spot. The opposite side is rounded, as are also the ends. An average plant produces 1,200 seeds.

Time of flowering, June-September. Time of seeding, July-September. Closely allied to this plant is the Broad Plantain, which has broad oval leaves and long tapering spikes.

The seeds, of both of these weeds are very common in clover and grass seed; and persons buying agricultural seeds or lawn mixtures, should examine closely, and guard carefully against plantain seed.

ERADICATION.—If the plants are not numerous, cut below the crown with a spud. If they are, use treatment outlined for Mustard.

RAGWEED, HOGWEED, BITTERWEED, OR ROMAN WORMWEEED, OR

Ragweed is an annual. The stem is much branched and slightly hairy, from 3 to 6 feet high. The leaves are very finely divided, the lower surface being of a lighter green, and the upper of a darker green. The flowers are numerous, from 1 to 6 inches long, green, and inconspicuous. The flowers are yellow, 1/4 inch across, infertile in the terminal spikes, and fertile only at the base of sharp tip, around which are arranged 4 to 6 spines, 3/16 inches long. They have great vitality and remain in the soil a long time without injury. The plant produces about 6,000 seeds. The seed has a milk of cows which eat it.

Time of flowering, July-September. Time of seeding, August-November. Dispersal—as an impurity in seed grain; and by wind and water, being borne long distances by freshets.

ERADICATION.—For the eradication of the weed, special attention must be given to the fall cultivation of the soil, to prevent seeds from ripening. Gang-plow or cultivate and harrow stubble ground immediately after harvest, and repeat cultivation at intervals until late in the fall; then plow or rip up and follow with a hoed crop. Subsequent treatment, the same as for Mustard.
