Standard Bank of Canada.

HEAD OFFICE, TORONTO. G. P. REID, - - MANAGER

Capital Authorized ... $2,000,000 Paid Up 1.000,000 Reserve Fund 600,000

Agencies in all principal points in Cntario, Quebec, Manitoba, United States and England.

DURHAM AGENCY.

A general Banking business trans acted. Drafts issued and collections made on all points. Deposits received and in erest allowed at cur rent rates.

THE SAVINGS BANK.

Interest allowed on Savings Bank deposits of $1 and upwards. Prompt attention and every facility afforded customers living at a distance

J. HELLY, Agent.

006-00000000000

For all kinds of

FURNITURE

of the best makes

TRY

PROMPT ATTENTION TO

UNDERTAKING

DEPARTMENT.

,0000000000000000

& NODE, OLD

BARCLAY & NOBLE desire to inti mate to the public of Durham and vicinity that they have now opened out in the Calder Implement Waterooms a full line of Agricultural Implements and Sylvester Machinery, all kinds. Adams' Waggons. Tudhore Buggies. Tolton l'en harvesters and Pulpers. Blatchford Organs and Pianos. Gurney's Stoves and Ranges. The New Williams Sewing Machines. Sawyer-Massey Engines and Separators The Knoli Washer and Wringer. Maxwell Churns and Barrows. Brantford Windmills.

Gas and Gasoline Engines, Etc., Etc.

Maxwell Binders and Mowers.

DFFICE

TO -Farmers. Threshers and Millmen.

AT THE OLD STONE FOUNDR'

WE MAKE

arnace Kettles, Power Straw Cuters. Hot Air Furnaces, Shingle lachinery, Band Saws, Emery Mahines for hand and power, Crestngs, Farmers' Kettles, Columns. Church Seat Ends, Bed Fasteners. 'encing, Pump-Makers' Supplies. chool Desks, Fanning Mill Castngs. Light Castings and Builders' upplies, Sole Plates and Points for ifferent ploughs in use, and Castng Repairs for Flour and Saw Mills team Engines, Horse Powers, Seprators, Mowers and Reapers. Also irculars and X-Cut-Saws gumed filed and set.

WE REPAIR

SHINGLES FOR SALE

CHARTER SMITH,

Foundryman, Durham, Ont. have another look."

feeling no fatigue, but obeying the potent instinct which allowed him no

It then occurred to him that perhaps the girl had not heard of the order,

though this was improbable enough, for such a thunderclap could not have burst without being heard by all. Evidently interested in knowing the small-sage. At any cost he must see her beforehand and do what he could to en-

But all his endeavors were in vain.

It was now 11 o'clock, and Michael,

though under any other circumstances

it would have been useless, thought of

of the head of police. The proclama-

Michael then returned to the other side of the Volga, to the quarter in which was the office of the head of po-

Every one was in a hurry, for the means of transport would be much sought after among this crowd of banished people, and those who did not set about it soon ran a great risk of not being able to leave the town in the prescribed time, which would expese

them to some brutal treatment from

Owing to the strength of his elbows.

Michael Strogoff was able to cross the court. But to get into the office and up to the clerk's little window was a much more difficult business. How ever, a word into an inspector's ear and a few judiciously given rubtes were powerful enough to gain him a passage

The man, after taking him into the waiting room, went to call the proper

Michael Strogoff would not be long in making everything right with the police and being free in his movements

While waiting he looked about him.

and what did be see? There, fallen rather than seated on a bench, was a girl, a prey to silent despair, although her face could scarcely be seen, the profile alone being visible against the Michael Strogoff could not be mistak-

Not knowing the governor's orders.

she had come to the police office to get her pass s med. They had refused to sign it. No doubt she was authorized to go to Irkutsk, but the order was per emptory; it abouiled all previous au

thorizations, and the routes to Siberia

were closed to her. / Michael, delighted

at having found her again, approaches

She looked up for a moment, and he face brightened on recognizing her trav eling companion. She instinctively rose, and. like a drowning man who clutches at a spar, she was about to ask his help. At that moment the agent touched Michael on the shoulder

The young Livonian, seeing the on!

disappear, fell back again on her beach

Three minutes had not passed before med by the agent. In his hand he had his podorojna, which threw open the holding out his hand, "Sister," said Le

She understood. She rose as if some

"Sister," repeated Michael Strogoff

"I will follow you, brother," replied

the girl, putting her hand into that of Michael Strogoff, and together they left known, the poderojna, drawn up in the name of Nicholas Korpanoff, authorized journey to Siberia. They appeared.

dential intervention of this unexpected

"we are authorized to continue our sudden inspiration prevented her from hesitating a moment.

the police station.

en. He instantly recognized the young able her to avoid such a repulse.

finding her again.

ture from the town.

the governor's agents.

room for thought. All was in vain.

CHAPTER IV.

ST as the reading of the proclamation by the head of the police came to an end an idea darted instinctively into the mind of Michael Strogoff.

"What a singular coincidence," thought he, "between this proclamation expelling all foreigners of Asiatic origin and the words exchanged last evening between those two gypsies of the Zingari race! 'The Father himself sends us where we wish to go,' that old man said. But 'the Father' is the emperor. He is never called anything else among the people. How could those gypsies have foreseen the measure taken against them? How could they have known it beforehand, and where do they wish to go? Those are suspicious people, and it seems to me that to them the government proclamation must be more useful than injurious."

But these reflections, though certainly correct, were completely dispelled by another, which drove every other thought out of Michael's mind. He forgot the Zingaris, their suspicious words, the strange coincidence which resulted from the proclamation. The remembrance of the young Livonian girl suddenly rushed into his mind. "Poor child!" he thought to himself "She cannot now cross the frontier."

In truth the young girl was from Riga. She was Livonian, consequently Russian, and now could not leave Russian territory. The permit which had been given her before the new measures had been promulgated was evidently no longer available. All routes to Siberia had just been pitilessly closed to her, and whatever was the motive which was taking her to Irkutsk, she was now forbidden to go This thought greatly occupied Mi chael Strogoff. He said to himself, vaguely at first, that without neglecting anything of what was due to his important mission it would perhaps be possible for him to be of some use to this brave girl, and this len pleased him. Knowing how serious were the dangers which be, an energetic and vigorous man, would have personally CALDER'S to encounter through a country of which, however, the roads were familiar, he could not conceal from himself how infinitely greater they would prove to a young, unprotected girl. As she was going to Irkutsk, she would be obliged to follow the same road as himself; she would have to pass through the bands of invaders, as he was about to attempt doing himself. If, moreover, and according to all probability, she had at her disposal only the resources necessary for a journey taken under ordinary circumstances, Domestic requirments including how could she manage to accomplish it under conditions which late events would render not only perilous, but expensive?

"Well," said he, "if she takes the route to Perm it is nearly impossible but that I shall fall in with her. Then I will watch over her without her suspecting it, and as she appears to be as anxious as myself to reach Irkutsk she will cause me no delay

But one thought leads to another. Michael Stregoff had till now reasoned on the supposition of doing a kind action, of rendering a service, but now another idea flashed into his brain, and the question presented itself under quite a new aspect.

"The fact is," said he to himself. "that I have much more need of her than she can have of me. Her presence will be useful in drawing off suspicion from me. A man traveling alone agrees the steppes may be easily guessed to be a courier to the czar. If, on the contrary, this young girl accompanies me, I shall appear in the eyes of all the Nicholas Korpanoff of my podorojua. Therefore she must accompany me. Therefore I must find ber again roads to Siberia for him. He again ap at any cost. It is not probable that proached the young Livonian, and since yesterday evening she has been able to get a carriage and leave Nijni Novgorod. I must look for her. And may God guide me!"

Michael left the great square of Nijni Novgorod, where the tumult produced by the carrying out of the prescribed journey to Irkutsk. Will you come?" measures had now reached its height. Recriminations from the banished strangers, shou's from the agents and Cossacks who were using them so brutally, all together made an indescribable uproar. The girl for whom he searched could not be there. It was now 9 o'clock in the morning. The steamboat did not start till 12. chael Strogoff had therefore nearly three hours to employ in searching for her whom he wished to make his trav- this merchant to be accompanied on his eling companion. He crossed the Volga again and hunt- therefore, to be a brother and sister ed through the quarters on the other traveling under the protection of the side, where the crowd was much less imperial police. Both, seated together considerable. He visited every road, at the stern, gazed at the receding both in the high and low towns. He town so disturbed by the governor's entered the churches, the natural ref- order. Michael had as yet said nothuge for all who weep, for all who suf- ing to the girl. He had not even quesfer. Nowhere did he meet with the tioned her. He waited until she should young Livonian. speak to him whenever that was nec-"And yet," he repeated, "size could essars. She had been anxious to leave not have left Nijni Novgorod yet. We'll that town, in which but for the proviprotector she would have remained imprisoned. She said nothing, but her looks spoke her thanks.

The Caucasus had been steaming on diverted. for about two hours when the young Livonian, addressing herself to Michael Strogoff, said;

"Are you going to Irkutsk, brother? "Yes, sister," answered the young man. "We are both going the same way. Consequently wherever I go you shall go."

"Tomorrow, brother, you shall know why I left the shores of the Baltic to go beyond the Ural mountains."

"I ask you nothing, sister." "You shall know all," replied the girl, with a faint smile. "A sister should hide nothing from her brother. But I cannot today. Fatigue and sorrow have Michael wandered about thus for two broken me down." hours. He went on without stopping.

"Will you go and rest in your cabin?" asked Michael.

"Yes-yes, and tomorrow"-"Come, then"- if he had wished to end it by the name of his companion, of which be was still "Nadia," said she, holding out her est news from Siberia, how could the hand.

He hesitated to finish his sentence as

"Come, Nadia," answered Michael, be ignorant of the measures taken by "and make what use you like of your the governor-measures which concernbrother Nicholas Korpanoff." And he ed her so directly? But if she was igled the girl to the cabin engaged for norant of it she would come in an hour to the quay, and there some mercliess her off the saloon. agent would brutally refuse her a pas-

Michael Strogoff returned on deck, and, eager for any news which might bear on his journey, he mingled in the groups of passengers, though without taking any part in the conversation. and he at length almost despaired of Should be by any chance be questioned and obliged to reply he would announce himself as the merchant Nicholas Korpanoff, going back to the frontier in the Caucasus, for he did not wish it to be presenting his podorojna at the office suspected that a special permission authorized him to travel to Siberia.

tion evidently did not concern him. The young Livonian did not come to since the emergency had been foreseen dinner. She was asleep in her cabin, for him, but he wished to make sure and Michael did not like to awaken that nothing would hinder his depar-

Between 11 and 2, the moon being new, it was almost dark. Nearly all the passengers were then asleep on the deck, and the silence was disturbed only by the noise of the paddles striking the water at regular intervals. Anxiety kept Michael Stregoff-awake. He walked up and down, but always in the stern of the steamer. Once, however, he happened to pass the engine room. He then found himself in the part reserved for second and third class passengers.

He stopped. Voices appeared to come from a group of passengers enveloped in cloaks and wraps, co that it was impossible to recognize them in the dark. But it sometimes happened that when the steamers chimney sent forth a plume of raddy flames among the volumes of smoke the sparks seemed to fall among the group as though thousands of spangles had been suddenly ill-minated. Michael was about to step up the ladder when a few words reached his ear, distinctly uttered in that strange tongue which he had heard during the night at the fair.

Instinctively he stopped to listen. Protected by the shadow of the forecastle, he could not be perceived himself. As to seeing the passengers who were talking, that was impossible. He was obliged to confine himself to listen-

The first words exchanged were of no importance-to him at least-but they allowed him to recognize the voices of the man and woman whom he had heard at Nijni Novgorod. This, of course, made him redouble his attention. It was, indeed, not at all impossible that the gypsies, a scrap of whose conversation he had overheard, now banished with all their fellows. should be on board the Caucasus.

And it was well for him that he listeved, for he distinctly heard this question and answer made in the Tartar

"It is said that a courier has set out from Moscow for Irkutsk." "It is so said. Sangarre, but either this courier will arrive too late, or he will not arrive at all."

"The head of police will see you." he Michael Strogoff started involuntarily at this reply which concerned him so "Good!" returned Michael, and with directly. He tried to see if the man out saying a word to her for whom he and women who had just spoken were had been searching all day, without rereally those whom he suspected, but assuring her by even a gesture which the shadow was too deep, and he could might compromise either her or him not succeed. seif, he followed the man through the

In a few moments Michael Strogo? had regained the stern of the vessel without having been perceived, and, being to whom she could look for help taking a sent by himself, he buried his face in his hands. It might have been supposed that he was asleep. Michael Strogoff reappeared, accompa-

He was not asleep, however, and did not even think of sleeping. He was reflecting on this, not without a lively apprehension: "Who is it knows of in departure and who can have any interest in knowing it?"

CHAPTER V.

HE next day, the 18th of July, at twenty minutes sand!" to 7 in the morning, the Cancasus reached the Eafrom the town. Michael did not even vonian had taken passage on board leave the young Livonian girl alone on the fare which satisfied his companion. the Caucasus. Their embarkation was board, as she had not yet reappeared on and in less than twenty minutes Mimade without any difficulty. As is deck.

ern frontier of Russia that the insur- the stern, and without other preamble rection and invasion had reached con Nadia, lowering her voice so as to be siderable proportions. Communication heard by him alone, began: between Siberia and the empire was al- "Brother, I am the daughter of an exchael Strogoff heard without leaving arrivals.

This information could not but cause "I, too, am going to Irkutsk." answertains, so as to judge for himself of the safe into her father's hands." truth of these rumors and enable him to guard against any possible contin-more direct intelligence from some na- Siberia and that the itussian authoritive of Kasan when his attention was ties could in no way bluder blun.

leaving the Caucasus Michael recog- a means only of necelerating her journized the troop of gypsies who the ney to her father. day before had appeared in the Nijni Novgorod fair. There on the deck of the steamboat were the old Bohemian and the woman who had played the spy on him. With them and no doubt under their direction landed about twenty dancers and singers from fifteen to twenty years of age, wrapped in old cloaks, which covered their spangled dresses. These dresses, just then glancing in the first rays of the sun, reminded Michael of the curious appearance which he had observed during the night. It must have been the glitter of those spangles in the bright flames issuing suddenly from the steamboat's funnel which had attracted his atten-

"Evidently." said Michael to himself, "this troop of Zingari, after remaining below all day, crouched under the forecastle during the night. Were these gypsies trying to show themselves as little as possible? Such is not according to the usual custom of their race." Michael Strogoff no longer doubted that the expressions he had heard which so clearly referred to him had proceeded from this tawny group and had been exchanged between the old gypsy and the woman named Sangarre. Michael involuntarily moved toward the gangway as the Bonemian troop was leaving the steamboat, not to return to it again. The old Bohemian was there in a humble attitude, little conformable with the effrontery natural to his race. One would have said that he was endeavoring rather to avoid attention than to attract it. His battered hat, browned by the suns of every clime, was pulled forward over his wrinkled face. His arched back was bent under an old cloak, wrapped closely round him notwithstanding the heat. It-would have been difficult in this miserable dress to judge of either his size or face. Near him was the gypsy Sangarre, a woman about thirty years old. She was tall and well made, with olive complexion, magnificent eyes and golden hair, and carried herself to perfec-

Sangarre was regarding him with a peculiar gaze, as if she wished to fix his features indelibly in her memory.

It was but for a few moments when Sangarre herself followed the old man and his troop, who had already left the

"That's a bold gypsy," said Michael to himself. "Could she have recognized me as the man whom she saw at Nijni Novgorod? These confounded Zingaris have the eyes of a cat! They can see in the dark, and that woman there might well know"-

Michael Strogoff was on the point of following Sangarre and the gypsy band. but he stopped.

"No," thought he; "no unguarded proceedings. If I were to stop that old fortune teller and his companions, my incognito would run a risk of being discovered. Besides, now they have landed, before they can pass the frontier I shall be already beyond the Ural. I know that they may take the route from Kasan to Ichim, but that affords no resources to travelers, and, besides, a tarantass drawn by four good Siberian horses will always go faster than a gypsy cart."

By this time the old man and Sangarre had disappeared in the crowd. An hour afterward the bell rang on board the Caucasus, calling the new passengers and recalling the former ones. It was now 7 o'clock in the morning. The requisite fuel had been received on board, and about 10 o'clock in the morning the young Livenian, leaving her cabin, appeared on deck. Michael Strogoff went forward and took her hand.

"Look, sister!" said he, leading her to the bows of the Carea as.

The view was indeed well worth ex-

The Caucasus bad just then reached the confinence of the Volga and the Kama. There she would leave the former river after baying descended it for more than 400 versus to ascend the latder for 400 versts.

The Karna was here very wide, and its wooded banks were lovely. A few white sails enlivened the sparkling water. The Lorizon was closed by a line of hills covered with aspens, alders and sometimes large onlis.

But these beauties of nature could not distract the thoughts of the young Livonian even for an instant. She had left her hand in that of her companion and soon, turning to him, said:

"At what distance are we from Mos-

"Nine hundred versts," answered Mi-

"Nine hundred out of seven thou-

The beil now announced the breakfast hour. Nadia followed Michael san quay, seven versis Strogoff to the restaurant. She ate little, as a poor girl whose means are small would do. Michael Strogoff Michael Strogoff and the young Lithink of landing. He was unwilling to thought it best to content himself with chael Strogoff and Nadia returned on There was a report along all the east- deck. There they seated themselves in ready extremely difficult. All this Mi- ile. My name is Nadia Fedor. My mother died at Riga scarcely a month the deck of the Caucasus from the new age, and I am going to Irkutsk to rejoin my father and share his exile."

him great uneasiness and increase his ed Michael, "and I shall thank beaven wish of being beyond the Ural moun- if it enables me to give Nadia Fedor "Thank you, brother," replied Nadia.

Michael Strogoff then added that he gency. He was thinking of seeking had obtained a special portor in for Nadia asked nothing more. She saw Among the passengers who were in this fortunate meeting with Michael

"I had," said she, "a permit which authorized me to go to Irkutsk, but the order of the governor of Nijni Novgo. rod annulled that, and but for you brother. I should have been unable to leave the town, and without doubt I should have perished."

"And dared you alone, Nadia," said Michael, "attempt to cross the steppes of Siberia?"

"The Tartar invasion was not known when I left Riga," replied the young girl. "It was only at Moscow that I learned that news." "And notwithstanding that you continued your journey?"

"It was my duty." This word showed the character of the courageous girl.

She then spoke of her father, Wassill Fedor. He was a much esteemed phy. sician at Riga, but his connection with some secret society having been asserted be received orders to start for Irkutsk, and the police who brought the order conducted him without delay beyond the frontier. Wassili Fedor had but time to embrace his sick wife and his daughter, so soon to be left alone. when, shedding bitter tears, he was led away.

A year and a half after her husband's departure Mme. Fedor died in the arms of her daughter, who was thus left alone and almost penniless. Nadia Fedor then asked and easily obtained from the Russian government an authorization to join her father at Irkutsk. She wrote and told him she was starting. She had barely enough money for this long journey, and yet she did not hesitate to undertake it. She would do what she could. God would do the rest. The next day, the 19th of July, the Caucasus reached Perm, the last place at which she touched on the Kama. The government of which Perm is the capital is one of the largest in the Russian empire and, extending over the Ural mountains, encroaches on Siberian territory. Marble quarries, mines of salt, platinum, gold and coal are worked here on a large scale. Although Perm by its situation has become an important town, it is by no means attractive, being extremely muddy and dirty and possessing no resources. This want of comfort is of no consequence to those going from Russia to Siberia, for they come from the more civilized districts and are supplied with all necessaries, but to those arriving from the countries of central Asia, after a long and fatiguing journey, it would no doubt be more satisfactory if the first European town of the empire, situated on the Asiatic frontier, were better supplied with stores.

At Perm the travelers sell their vehicles, more or less damaged by the long journey across the plains of Siberia. There, too, those passing from Europe to Asia purchase carriages during the summer and sleighs in the winter season before starting for a several months' journey through the steppes.

Michael Strogoff had already sketched out his programme, so now he had only to execute it.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from onefourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

scott & Bowne, Toronto, Canada.

EVERY THURSDAY MORNIN AT THE CHRONICLE PRINTING HOUSE, BARAFRAXA DURHAM, ONT. ...

THE JOB : : Is completely stock DEPARTMENT AR NEW TYPE, fording facilities for turning out Fi work.

W. IRWIN.

EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Medical Directory

Dr. Jamieson.

OFFICE AND RESIDEN short distance east of Knapr Lambton Street, Lower Town, Office hours from 12 to 2 o'clock. J. G. Hutton, M. D., C.

MEMBER COLLEGE P VI ians and Surgeons, Ontario, hours 9 to 12 a. m., 2 to 4 p. m. Re and office, Old Bank buildings.

Town, Durham. Telephone No. 16

Arthur Gun, M. D. DHYSICIAN AND SURGEON hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 4 p. m. at p. m. Special attention given to Dental Directory.

Dr. T. G. Helt, L. D.

OFFICE-FIRST DOOR EA Block, Residence-Lambton Stre he Station

Legal Directory.

J. P. Telford.

DARRISTER, SOLICITOR, D Office over Gordon's new J Store, Lower Town, Durham. Aus of money to loan at 5 per cent.

G. Lefroy McCaul.

DARRISTER, SOLICITOR, D McIntyre's Block, Lower For ham, Collection and Agency 1 attended to. Searches made at the

W. S. Davidson.

DARRISTER, NOTARY, CO. reasonable rates, and on terms borrower. Office, McIntyre Blog the Bank).

Miscellaneous.

Miss Margaret G. G LIONOR GRADUATE OF onto, having taken the Musical C

corner Durham and Elgin streets. TAMES BROWN, ISSUE U Marriage Licenses, Darham,

the Toronto Conservatory of Mus

Pupils taken at her mother's t

JUGH MACKAY. eer for the County of Grey, Sales attended to and notes cashed.

AMES CARSON, DURHA ensed Auctioneer for the Grey, Land Valuator, Bailiff of Division, Court Sales and all other promptly attended to-highest a

Sold by All Newsdez

MEJ.W. PEPPER

nd Music a vast volume of New, Copyright Compositions by the I diar authors. 64 Pages of Piano half Vocal, half Instrumental—21 Co

Pleces for Plano-Once a Month Cents. Yearly Subscription, $2.00 will send us the name and address you a copy of the Magazine Free. Eighth & Locust Sts., Philadelph