call bishops, were anciently called

Apostles." This is Theodoret's comment on this passage. Chrysostom and Jerome also call him the Apostle or Bishop of the Philipians. There are about eleven persons who did not belong to the original Apostolic college called apostles in the Scriptures.

Besides these there are many more called "companions," "fellow-laborers." etc., who seem to have done the same work, and who, though not expressly called Apostles in the Bible are so called by the early Christian writers, and are rated in history and tradition as "Apostolic Bishops."

There is not a word in the New Testament which implies the parity of copacy is, that Barnabas and Saul received ordination from presbyters only. Acts 13: 1-3. This cannot be regarded an ordination, because they were "prophets and teachers" before and engaged in "ministering to the Lord." If the other three were in orders, so were they. If, on the other hand, Paul and Barnabus were laymen, then the other three were laymen also, and if any ordination was performed, it was by laymen.

Dodderidge's candid comment on this passage is, "If there be any reference to a past fact in these words, it is probable to some revelation made to Paul and Barnabas, to signify that they should take a journey into sev-preach the gospel there. But that they were now invested with the Apostolic office, by these inferior ministers, is a thing neither credible in itself, nor consistent with what Paul himself says. Gal. 1: 1. And that they now receive a power, before unknown in the Church, of preaching to idolatrous Gentiles is inconsistent with Acts 15: 20-1; and upon many other considerations, to among the moderns. But even al lowing that it does refer to persons, we find St. Paul, in anoth r place, claiming Timothy's ordination as performed by hims-if. His words are: "Stir up the gits of God, which is in thee, by the putting on of my reconcile the two passages. It has

That is just what they say of Vapo-Cresolene. The vaporizer is practically indestructible, and the Cresolene is certainly not expensive. This way of treating affections of the throat is most conomical, and is also most effective. Our little picture illustrates how it's used. You put some Cresolene in the vaporizer, light lamp beneath, and then breathe-in the soothing, healing vapor. For whooping-cough and croup it's a perfect specific. Vapo-Cresolene is sold by druggists everywhere.

A Vapo-Cresolene outfit, including the Vaporizer and Lamp, which should last a life-time, and a bottle of Cresolene, complete, $1.50; extra supplies of Cresolene 25 cents and 50 cents. At this time McRae was fairly well jagged and was talking fight in a voice that could be heard all through the house. Lathbridge dropped some remark, and the upshot was that the two men began to quarrel. McRae grabbed his opponent and they fell to the floor, with McRae on top. The bar room was crowded by this time with an excited crowd, and Mr. Joshua Warrilow, proprietor of the hotel, made an effort to separate the combatants. To assist himself in this he used a baton, with which he struck McRae over the shoulders and told him to let go. Then by a supreme effort McRae was torn away from the other man, and as he was pulled to his feet he exclaimed "Look what he has in his hand." Several present saw something glitter and then Lathbridge bolted for the door and made his escape Blood was pouring down over Mckae's face and he was taken to D. A.
