THAT BOY.

INFORMATION is wanted by the mother of the youngest of two boys who left the town a week ago last Monday, for unknown parts. They were dressed in dark clothes, and are both of dark complexion. The little fellow, who is about 13, weighs about 75 pounds, and wears a cap and short pants, while the taller boy is 17 years of age, weighs 125 pounds, and carries a rifle. Their names are Morgan Agnew, Lisle Cudmore, respectively. It is thought that they are on their way north for a shoot, although other reports say they are heading for Michigan. Any information that will help in the finding out of the whereabouts of these boys will be thankfully received at this office Other papers kindly copy.-Clinton

YOUR SENSE OF DUTY

CULTIVATE IT TO THE EXTREME LIMIT OF YOUR ABILITY.

Is the Noblest, Most Manly and at the Same Time Most Womanly of Qualities-The Real Basis of Education and Success.

Teachers and parents are asked to consider the statement that a sense of duty is the foundation of real education and the basis of success. Whatever has been achieved of real importance in the world has been based upon a sense of duty. Religion itself is founded upon duty, and its main teachings deal with questions of duty-the duty of men and women toward each other and toward their Creator.

Children's minds will be strengthened, their work made easier and their ambition stimulated if they can be made to feel toward duty that it is not repulsive, but that it offers an opportunity for achievement, an opportunity for every individual to prove his worth and that he deserves to succeed. If duty can be strongly developed in the mind of a young child, the effect will remain through life and make that child's existence useful.

Parents should impress upon their children-and young people should impress upon themselves-the fact that a sense of duty is the noblest, most manly and at the same time most womanly of qualities.

The average small boy thinks that there is something "soft" about a dutiful boy. He should be taught that what made Washington a fighter and Lincoln great among his fellows was nothing else than a sense of duty to their country.

What makes a fireman brave is a sense of duty. A sense of duty is at the foundation of every effort made to provide for children, to meet the obligations of life honestly.

The German philosopher Fichte, as admirable a moral character as the world has known, exemplifies as per-Mr. H. H. Miller gave an able and fectly as any the beauty of a life inthose engaged in shaping the character of the young.

HERE AND THERE.

A Durham girl, so the story goes, away from home, had become greatly infatuated with that popular game, ping pong. She wrote home about ping pong, lauded ping pong to the skies, and said she was "just crazy" about ping pong. The parents, dumb founded at what they considered their daughter's folly, wrote her a letter in pretty strong terms in which they stated emphatically that she had better ship Ping Pong immediately, as they would have no Chinamen in their family.

Wm. Murray, of Pinkerton, had a lively experience one night last week. In a dream he saw two men in a deadly struggle for victory. One of the men, gaining the mastry over his smaller opponent, undertook to put his eyes out. This was too much for Murray to stand, and he thought it was time to take a hand in the struggle. He aimed a right hander at the vicious man but came in contact with something hard. He awoke to find that he had knocked a large chunk of plaster off the wall and had broken his wrist,
