UNION OF CHURCHES.

Presbyterians, Congregationalists and Methodists May Unite.

Committees of the Presbyterians, Methodist and Congregational bodies are now meeting to consider the question of an organic union of these three denominations. It is already manifest that the minds of many of the influential leaders of these churches are singularly favorable to a frank and sympathetic examination of the considerations that make for union and co-operation, and are in achieve the great object. It is equally true that no close grappling with the subject has been attempted, and that as yet the manifestation of the excellent spirit which prevails among substantial result which had been advance, and one that seemed beyond expectation and not so many years

But in How many names of God are sung! those earlier and sterner days creeds held men in fidelity to truths which otherwise might have perished, and their votaries have sunk into feeble conformity with perfunctory religous formulas. It took the world a long time to learn the spirit of the Sermon teaching of the history is that the higher evolution of life is through pain, and travail, and failure, and error, and sacrifice. It would seem that for generations we have been evolving the conditions which now exist, and by the "increasing purpose" which comes with the process of the suns the thoughts of men have and in all the fields of human enof religion and of morals, and in the ordered stages to its final evolution. to her end early on Friday morning. required. Concrete does not harden This is simply to assert man's re sponsibility not to deny the attributes of Divinity. But, however, that may be, one of the facts of our time is the growth of a world conscience and a new recognition of human brotherhood, and the identity of human interests and moral responsibilities the world over. "In God's good time" may be a phrase of pregnant meaning, and we may be ready to-day for such relations between

The Methodist congregation read by Rev. Brown. JNO. A. DARLING ships. The Methodist congregation which listens to a Presbyterian clergyman finds that it is the familiar evangelical teaching which falls from the pulpit. So it is when a Methodist preaches to a Presbyterian congregation or a Congregationalists to either. It would be possible for either to preach a sermon that would create divisions and asperities, but he would feel that to do so in a

But at least there need be no unnecessary divisions, no useless waste of resources, no vain separation through non-essentials and minor differences. If, however, nonessentials are magnified, there can be no union. Just as surely, if essential are magnified, there can be nothing else than union. It is a great
