In business there are some men who can tell you how to run a store or a factory successfully, who have never demonstrated their theories in practice. Some of the finest essays on business methods have been written by those who are as familiar with the methods of winding up a business practically as they are in running it theoretically. What an amount of humbug there is in the world, and we have not to go far to discern this. At the house where you live you can study this out.

The authorities spend a lot of time and money trying to kill off gambling houses and bucket shops, and the business goes on on as large a scale under their noses in a different form. It all depends on what you steal and how you steal whether you will be given a government job at board wages. That has been proven. It all depends what oou gamble in and how large are your stakes, whether you will be known by the yulgar name of gambler or the more euphonious appellation of "operator." stake your little pile in roulette, you they will carry you out and bury among the farmers than the same for cramps, colic and pain in the may find a hand on your collar and you in the potter's field of the busi- energetic Charlie. be lined up before the "beak." Even ministers of the gospel find it respectable as well as convenient to supplement their stipends with gains from stock deals, and some of them are as familiar with the stock list and the trend of the market as they are with theology and rhetoric perhaps a trifle better. Here is one of those anomalies that must puzzle the very devil, who must often be highly amused at the fine distinctions men draw between right and wrong. To make $60,000 in one siap on the fictitious advance of a railroad stock is respectable and commendable; to is low and criminal. MORAL SMALLPOX.

If people were half as much afraid of moral disease as they are of physical, ministers would be as busy daily as the doctors are when a smallpox scare starts. By the way it is said that dirt is the origin of smallpox, and that the eruption is the effort of the physical organism to throw it off The same law holds in the spiritual as in the physical world. If dirt be in a man it will be sure to come to the surface and show whether upon his body or his soul. That is the reason there are so many pockmarked people in society and in business. A man with a pure clean heart will be clean in hands, face, mouth and every other manifestation. When you hear a fellow telling dirty stories, saying nasty things of others, or using pro fane language, you can say to your self " moral small pox." When you see the "pits" of meanness, averice, cunning, overreaching, bratality and dishonesty upon a man's life you may depend upon it that he is a moral sinner, and that which is bred in the bone has come out in the flesh.
