Military Device Destined to Revolutionise

Successful contestants at Bisley brought back with them from land a little instrument which destined to play an important part in the warfare of the future. It is called a hyposcope, and its purpose is to enable a marksman to fire with accurate aim without exposing his head to the fire of the enemy. was invented by William Youlton of Brighton and was used with good results in the latter part of the Boer

The hyposcope is adapted to be secured to the stock of the rifle, near the breech. It consists of a series of mirrors mounted in a tube of inverted L shape. The shorter arm lies across the barrel of the rifle, while the longer arm hangs down at one side. The first mirror reflects light coming in along the barrel of the rifle to a second mirror at the elbow of the instrument, which di rects the rays downwards to a mirror at the lower end of the tube, and thence it passes out at angles to the eye. Thus on looking in at the eye-piece one can see the sights of his rifle and take accurate aim while holding the gun above his

A company of 100 men using the hyposcope skillfully would be able to kill 700 of the enemy and wound 200 more in less than five minutes. A regiment safely entrenched could put hors de combat more men than Napoleon lost at Waterloo.

It need hardly le said that France is in a similar plight, and that in all probability the proportion of white to other races on the earth is steadily falling year by year, despite the recent destruction of most aboriginal races by alcohol and tuberculosis. As a result of ten years' fall in New South Wales, the birth rate is now just over twenty-five per thousand. This may be compared with the rate of fifty reached in an alien quarter of London not so long ago. The Commission, which includes five medical men, is to furnish its report within three months, and is to refer to the difficulty experienced by young men in obtaining private employment, owing to the development of State Socialism.

"terpiejack's Escape. The London Express of a recent date had the following: A steeplejack named Towie has just had a terrible escape from death. He was ngaged with others in erecting a chimney 300 feet high at some bleach works at Edgeley, near Stockport, book "How to Live on Five Hundred and was taking down the staging a Year." when his hand became entangled in the ropes. He was lifted off his feet to the pulley, where his fingers became jammed in the wheels. Here he remained suspended at a height of 300 feet for ten minutes, and was with difficulty rescued by his comrades from his terrible plight. In a fainting condition the man was taken to Stockport Infirmary, where it was found that his fingers had been ractically torn from one of his.

Turkish Conspiracies.

Midhat Pasha, formerly a power in Turkey as leader of a reform party. brought about the deposition of Sultan Abdul Aziz. Prince Murad then was proclaimed sultan. Five days later the ex-sultan committed suicide, a fact which was proved by nineteen doctors. Ten days after this tragedy Sultan Murad became insane and was deposed and Abdul Hamid ascended the throne. Midhat was banished, but was received with so much favor in Europe that the sultan became nervous and recalled him and appointed him governor. of Syria. Here he'did much good, but found himself called upon to resign in 1880. He next became governor general of Smyrna, but shortly afterward he was arrested with Mehemet Rushdi Pasha and others on a charge of being concerned in the murder of Abdul Aziz. The trial dragged on for months, and Midhat, with others, was condemned to death, but on the intervention of the English government his sentence was changed to imprisonment for life. Midhat was sent to Taif, in Arabia, where many attempts were made to poison him, which were frustrated by his servant. One night, however, he was dragged from his room by some of the sultan's officials and strangled.
