ABOUT HORSES.

(From the Farmers Advocate.)
RESTRICT THE AUTOMOBILE.

Henry Price, in the Lafayette Journal, says: "The auto is a thing of a class and always will be, as the poor and average man can not own one. And now to make a long story short, was onto the legislature next winter that will not knock out this go-evil that has no business on the streets. If they want to run, let them get their right of way and build their own roads, and not run us off our own roads and confront us at every turn and corner while we are pursuing our legitimate business vocations. In these days when labor is so scarce we have to send to town after necessities, and when mother and children want to go for a pleasure drive, we do not propose that they should take their lives in their own hands. Neither do I propose to take my horses to have them trained to face an auto."

THE FAST WALKER.

The fast walking horse, and other things being equal, is the most profitable horse for the farmer. There is too little attention paid to the walk in selecting a sire, and just as little in choosing a brood mare. A team of horses with a clean step and a clever gait will cover nearly fifty per cent. more ground in a day than a slow pair. This in comparison means considerable economy in time, and in money as well, when expensive hired help has to be used for driving. When breaking the young colt to harness it is very important that he should be hitched by the side of a fast walker of good manners. By being induced to step out for some time after first leaning to the collar, the young horse may be to a great extent led to acquire a desirable gait. Slow walking, like other objections to some horses, is hereditary, and when a colt is found possessed of a very slow gait, the result of bad breeding, the greatest success cannot be expected from careful training. In the same manner to the colt that has been bred to walk may be injured by being broken to harness alongside a slow walker.

THE HORSE AND THE CAR.

The horse that is not afraid of the first electric car he meets is a freak. He lacks equine spirit, and displays a woeful want of assertiveness so essential to a truly natural horse disposition. Yet, horses must be brought to know that cars will do them no harm, and that their rumbling noise is no more hurtful than that of the farm wagon. There is one certain way this cannot be done, and this method is so obviously irrational that we were surprised when recently we saw an apparently intelligent horsewoman practicing it upon an ordinarily well-broken driver. Strange this irrational method is the one most naturally, or, at least, most humanly, employed. Its details are something like this: Electric car approaching, horse otherwise steady becomes more and more animated, begins to look for means of escape; driver tightens reins, seizes whip, gives a domineering command just as the car flies by, horse all in a tumult, begins to realize he is not hurt, and that a car is harmless, when suddenly the whip cuts him across the flank, the bit tears across his mouth, and, to his bewildered senses, the car has suddenly become transformed into an instrument of torture, which attacks him from behind, and from which the only escape is to bound away, irrespective of consequences, but at every bound the whip descends upon the tormented brute; until he either succeeds in getting away or the driver brings him under control, but he has his remembrances of a trolley car, and a horse's memory can generally be depended upon. Thus a horse that is otherwise well-broken becomes absolutely dangerous upon a road where cars are likely to be met, until by a process of elimination, he has come to discern more clearly between the acts of his driver and those of the car, and even when he has discovered that the car is harmless, he very often learns to regard it as a signal for more punishment. Fortunately, all drivers do not adopt this absurd method of teaching horses the harmlessness of cars. The man or woman who knows the horse nature, first shows the horse there is nothing to fear by being kind and gentle, and by keeping the temper under control. The horse very largely models his behavior according to the example of the driver, and, in time, if not abused when meeting cars or other unfamiliar objects, will soon lose his fear of them.
