MISS DICK

Wm. Black. — Durham, Ont.

Glenelg Centre.

On Wednesday Nov. 16th 1904, in Markdale at 10:30 o'clock by the Rev. Father Walters Miss Mary, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wilson of the 10th con., was united to the man of her choice, Mr. Archibald McMillen, of Scotch town. The bride was assisted by her sister Miss Annie while Mr. Ranald McMillen brother of the groom of Toronto, ably filled the duty of groomsman. After the ceremony they all drove to the parental home of the bride, where many more awaited them, and partook of a rich dinner and did justice to the wedding cake which was hard to equal. The afternoon was merrily spent in chit chat, toast and politics. Laurier, Ross and H. H. Miller stood well to the front and were all highly recommended by the proprietor Mr. Wilson. Father Walters, Messrs. Pickit, McMillen, Black and others from Scotchtown strongly held up the Dundonald, Whitney and Gamey's side of the platform, but Mr. Wilson was too well posted for Mr. Black as he had been supplied with as many as seven Globes a day during the recent campaign but, we think, he ment seven Globes weekly. It being now sunset Father Walters and several of the elder people had retired to their homes, the merriment commenced in earnest, and the dance was kept up till morning. Mr. and Mrs. Henrick and R. McMillen of Toronto, were present and also a number of people from Markdale and Sullivan, in all there was about one hundred. The bride wore a gown of white spun silk and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. The bridesmaid was attired in a similar manner while the groom and brother looked full of grace and cheer. The bride received many handsome and useful presents. Mr. and Mrs. McMillen are now settled in their home in our burg. We join their many friends in hearty congratulations.

GENERAL MERCHAND

Death of the Rev. Mr. Jansen.

The daily papers of last week brought word that the Rev. Mr. Jansen, for eight years minister in this town, died suddenly, in Winnipeg, on Wednesday. He had, a few weeks ago, given up his charge at Gretna, that he might take a post-graduate course in Manitoba College, and, though he had complained of feeling unwell for some time, he was able on Tuesday to lecture at Fort Rouge. So, suddenly and peacefully, came the end. On Friday his remains were interred at Winnipeg, the students and professors of the college following him to the grave.

Mr. Jansen came to this country from Holland when a young man, and was graduated from Knox College in 1889. His ministry was spent in Manitoulin, Durham, Hamilton, Sinaluta and Gretna, the longer service being given to Durham.

As might be expected, there was deep sorrow among his many friends here at the news of his death, and many were heard to express the wish that he might have been laid to rest in the Durham cemetery. On Sunday the pulpit in the Presbyterian church was draped in black, and bouquets of white flowers sat on the table. The choir sang with exquisite taste, "Blessed are the Dead," and Mr. Farquharson selected the same text as the theme of his discourse. After pointing out what constituted that blessedness, he referred to the grief that was felt at the death of their former pastor. He protested against the spirit that sought, at the hour of death, to pass a judgment on the soul's relation to his Maker. He did not think it proper even in the form of praise to enter a region so sacred—

"Merit lives from man to man,
But not from man, O Lord, to Thee."

Yet it was both proper and fitting that expression should be given to their sorrow and their sense of appreciation of the character and labors of him who was gone. It was fitting that such words should be spoken from the pulpit wherethe greater part of his ministry had been, and there was an appropriateness in such words being spoken by the one who had entered into his labors and could speak in the largest sense as the representative of the congregation.

The elements of character in Mr. Jansen that impressed the speaker were first his intense earnestness. A man's power is his earnestness, that may not be all, but if it is lacking all is utterly worthless—No one could meet Mr. Jansen or hear him speak without the conviction being forced on him that he was intensely an earnest man. He spoke what he felt, what he experienced and what to him was real, and that sense of reality gave him power. Then he was unwearied in his devoted services—It was the glory of the Apostle Paul that he was willing to spend and be spent in the church's services. He was ready in season and out of season to fill out the mission entrusted to him. When Jesus praised the woman that poured the ointment on his head he said: "she hath done what she could." No more can we say of any of us, and this we feel was true of him we mourn. He was "ready to spend and be spent," he "did what he could." And still further he was devoted to his congregation with an intense affection. "Ye are on my heart," said the Apostle, "to live and to die with you." "I desire not yours but you" were the protestings of his heart. No nobler quality can a minister possess than this, but there was abundant evidence for saying that he possessed it. His heart was in Durham while here, and it is safe to say that Durham was in his heart to his dying hour. That affection, worthy as it was, was not without its response on your part—a response more than he knew, a response the power of which you yourselves only begin to realize. It sometimes takes deaths frost to give sudden ripeness to the grain and make us aware of the love and esteem we owe. He has gone to the land where all secrets are revealed all hearts made known and where all that marred our vision is removed. We may say: "peace come away." We ourselves have like experiences and must breast the like billows. The speaker concluded by reading Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar." Mr. Drysdale sang with great feeling and expression "Only remembered for what we have done," and the service was over. The deep interest taken by all and the tearful countenances of many tell of the affection with which he is remembered in Durham.
