HEALTHY HORSES

The horse has but one stomach, and has but one chance at his food, so it is absolutely necessary to extract the largest amount of good from the food in its rapid passage through the stomach. As a rule, horses are either overworked or underworked, and suffer much from impaired digestion. This is followed by stagnation of the blood and a whole host of diseases. No trouble should be too great, to get and keep him in good shape for his every day work. Clydesdale Stock Food, with his ordinary feed, regulates his whole system by aiding the digestion, regulating the bowels, stimulating and correcting the action of the liver, loosening the hide, giving sleekness to the coat, and your horse will do more work and on less feed. It can be stopped at any time without bad results. Mr. D. B. McEachern, Harrison, Ont., says: "I have used your Clydesdale Stock Food for the last six months in my stable, and I find it is the best tonic I have ever used, and it is the only tonic that when using, I can stop at any time without bad results, and my horses will not lose in flesh like they will with other Stock Foods. No better remedies on the market than Clydesdale Heave Cure, Colic Cure, Worm Powder, Gall Cure, Embrocation Liniment and Tar Foot Remedy; they should be kept handy. You never can tell when they may be needed. If the above preparations are not found satisfactory your money will be refunded cheerfully by our dealers in your district, namely:

A Coiled Spring Wire Fence

With large, stiff stay wires, makes a perfect fence

Not one pound of soft wire enters into the construction of THE FROST. The uprights are immovably locked to the running wires with THE FROST WEDGE-LOCK, making an absolutely Stock-proof Fence. The Locks bind without kinking or crimping either the stays or lateral wires. Will not slip, and our new method of enamelling and baking prevents rust, which adds greatly to the appearance of the fence. Make no mistake. Buy THE FROST. It is the heaviest and the best. ### INSULT TO INJURY.

I'm really fond of music;
I know a tune or two,
An' I often hum 'em over
When I've nothing else to do,
But there's one that irritates me;
It is temptin' me to crime
When the organ grinder's playin'
'Bout the "Good Old Summer Time."

Shakin' at the cook stove
An' shiverin' at the grate,
Rebecca Grierson,
From mornin' until late;
Wishin' that the mercury
Would turn around an' climb—
An' the organ grinder's playin'
'Bout the "Good Old Summer Time."

I can stand the wind that's piercin',
I can half-way hold my own
When the grip is in my system
If I'm only let alone,
But it's clean beyond endurance
When the man expects a dime
For standin' there an' playin'
'Bout the "Good Old Summer Time."
—Washington Star.

Frenzied Finance.

In order that his wife might become better acquainted with business methods Mr. Ferguson handed $100 to her and instructed her to deposit it in bank in her own name and pay her bills thereafter with checks.

Several weeks afterward she came to him in a high state of indignation. "George," she said, "the other day those people down at the bank wrote me a note and told me I had 'overdrawn my account'—whatever that is—and that I would have to send them $4.75 'to balance it.' I sent it to them right away, but it didn't satisfy them. They're bothering me about it again."

"You sent the $4.75?"
"Yes, same day."
"Well, that's— By the way, Laura, how did you send it?"
"I sent them a check for it, of course."—Chicago Tribune.

APPENDIX JUST A TOY.

That is, of Course, to Surgeons of Cleverness—In 1,000 There Was Not One Death.

If, as was flippantly remarked recently in the editorial columns of one London paper, the removal of the appendix is an essential qualification for entry into smart society, the meeting of the other night of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society in London should have been the occasion of a smart gathering, for its interest centered, so to speak, round the appendix. Those present, numbering more than 200 surgeons and physicians, had two hours of appendix, in the course of which Sir Frederick Treves' lucid address, which opened the discussion, even a layman had ample occasion to improve his perfunctory acquaintance with it.

How thoroughly modern the subject is, was made manifest by a casual introductory remark by Sir Frederick Treves, when he mentioned that when, in 1887, before the same society which now had mustered in force to discuss complex problems at times presented by operations, he had first mooted the advisability of the removal of the appendix in cases of recurrent attacks, his suggestion had been received with polite scepticism, not unmixed with derision.

Since then a deal of water had flowed under the bridges. Sir Frederick had himself in private practice operated on more than 1,000 cases without a single death to mar the success of his record. One great London hospital records within a period of four years a total of exactly 1,000 cases of operations for appendicitis, with a mortality of a little more than 4 per cent. Similar favorable results were shown by statistics furnished by several of the larger general hospitals.

In view of these astonishing figures it occurred to a lay mind to enquire of expert opinion as to the fate of those who, seeing the appendix was not a modern innovation in the interest of the mechanism of the human race, had suffered from appendicitis in the dark ages before the introduction of the Treves operations. He was told in a hurried aside that they were reputed to be suffering from colic and other unpleasantnesses ending in "itis," and that in many of the cases the patient whose life would now be saved died of unrecognized appendicitis.

The greater part of Sir Frederick Treves' address was devoted to the consideration of the causes of relapse after the removal of the offending appendix, as shown by the recurrence of the attacks. A majority of these are of too technical a nature to admit of appreciation by a layman, but one or two of them are of more curious interest.

The recurrence of the pain is at time due to the incompleteness of the operation, when the appendix had not been entirely removed. Often again the pain is due to a sort of neuralgia in the amputated stomach.

More extraordinary, even to the lay mind, are cases which have occurred where the pain altogether is neurotic, a question of nerves pure and simple. Again, mistakes in diagnosis do occur and before now man has been deprived of an offending appendix only to find that his trouble had its seat in quite a different part of his machinery.

Sir Frederick did not, against all traditions, quote the familiar story of the man who, to guard against contingencies in the event of sudden loss of consciousness, was tattooed on his abdomen, "Do not operate, have had appendix removed three times," but he told a no less remarkable story of a patient who had come to him with a relapse after having undergone an operation for removal of the appendix.

In investigating matters, Sir Frederick was able to remove it for him a second time. On the first occasion, presumably, the surgeon had overlooked it.

Much more formidable than the operation during the quiescent period after the attack are those necessitated by local or general peritonitis during the attack, known as cases of "fulminating appendicitis," when every hour is of vital importance. In such cases it is always a question of touch and go, but even in these cases London is able to record of late a marked increase in the number of cases successfully treated.

From a layman's point of view, the discussion, which evoked too many speakers and too widespread an interest to be dismissed in a single session, and will therefore be continued next week, was decidedly reassuring. If he is fated to be deprived of his appendix, which in any case is of no value in the scheme of internal arrangements, he has every reason to face the prospect with equanimity.
