The Wonders of The Body.

Its mechanism, like delicate machinery, by even a slight cause is so disranged as to be practically useless. A headache is no trifling matter because the stomach, kidneys and liver are sure to be affected. To cure the cause of headaches and prevent new attacks, use Ferrozone; it aids the stomach by supplying nourishing blood, vitilizes the nerves and brain instantly. Ferrozone braces-gives tone-elevates your spirits. No such health bringer known. Fifty cents per box of fifty chocolate coated tablets at all dealers.

Prompt action on the part of the firemen and a perfect water supply saved Wiarton from a disastrous fire yesterday forenoon. At about eleven o'clock the roof of Mr. J. Flett's car riage shop was discovered to be in flames. The fire had made considerable progress before it was noticed, but the firemen were promptly on hand on the alarm being sounded. and laying two branches of hose, they succeeded in confining the flames entirely to the roof, which was practically entirely consumed. This was all the damage done other than that caused by the water, as the stock was nearly all removed. The loss is covered by insurance. The building is surrounded by frame structures, and it is a blessing the fire laddies succeeded in keeping the flames from spreading. The origin of the fire is a mystery.-Canadian.

CUCLIELMO MARCONI The Father of Wireless Telegraphy

This is the age of the elimination of the essentials. We have horseless carriages, trackless trolleys, inkless printing, loveless marriages, grapeless wine, clocks without hands, apples without seeds, and, greatest of all, telegraphy without wires. Marconi, who succeeded in performing this miracle of science which has been the dream of electrical experimenters since 1746, is a young Italian, born at Bologna and not yet thirty years old. His father is an Italian landed proprietor and his mother is the daughter of James Jameson, the famous Irish whiskey distiller.

At eight years of age, Guglielmo showed the first faint buds of promise of inventive genius; at twelve his tutor attempted to rob him of one of his devices; at sixteen he was absorbed in chemical, electrical and mathematical problems; and at twenty he was almost taxing the faith and love of his mother with the seemingly insane proposition of attempting to telegraph without wires, through hills and forests, across streams and over fields.

When he was twenty-one he went to England and somehow managed to interest Sir William Preece, engineer of the British telegraph system, sufficiently to secure his co-operation. When Marconi succeeded in sending a message two miles-a success sufficient to irritate him by the golden visions of greater distances yet to master-he was like Moses viewing the Promised Land which seemed impossible for him to enter. It seemed hopeless to persist further and he was discouraged almost to despair, but stuck loyally to the problem until the high-water mark of conquered distance rose to one hundred and twenty-five miles.

On December 13, 1901, the scientific world was astounded by the news that Marconi had succeeded in talking to England from Newfoundland across 2,000 miles of air and water. There was a smile of compassionate tolerance for the inventor who imagined he had done this, the smile of one who does not wish to arouse another from the empty happiness of a pleasant dream. But soon it was science that awoke to the realization of the marvel, and the fresh morning newspaper printed from news carried to the vessel by "marconigrams" and served with the fresh rolls on the breakfast table in midocean proves anew the wonder that grows greater as its field broadens and develops. Marconi was the first to send a recorded message through space by electromagnetic waves (in 1894); the first to telegraph from a moving ship (in 1897), and the first to speed a wireless message across the Atlantic. Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by W. C. Mack, at the Department of Agriculture

Here is a true story that furnishes another illustration of the great affection which the dog entertains for his master: Harold Best, who has not been at home for some months, came home to see his mother on the 24th. His dog remained here during his absence, but did not seem to be the to be as happy as a clam all through the day. Next morning when the young man parted from the dog, the latter seemed very dejected. He was put into the stable where he could be heard whining at intervals all thru the day and most of the night. But everything was quiet next morning, and on opening the door it was discovered that the dog was stone dead. He had literally died of grief .-- Teles-
