WILDCAT IN A CAR.

Conductor William Algie, Messenger Mathewson and an Owen Sound traveller had an exciting experience in a Grand Trunk baggage car with a wild cat en route from Owen Sound to London the other day. The cat was a monster, having been captured in Lions Head, near Wiarton, a year ago, and used for advertising purposes by a collar manufacturer of Owen Sound. The feline was held prisoner in a heavy wire cage. It became very savage, and in a frenzy of rage endeavored to liberate itself.
Conductor Algie's attention was drawn to the matter, and he secured the attendance in the car of the traveller in charge of the animal. With the aid of a heavy stick the cat was quieted. Suddenly the occupants of the car were startled by the cry of the messenger. "The cat's out boys!" The cat had wormed its way through the meshes of the cage and was perched on the safe beside the messenger, at work at his desk. Instantly the three men sought safety on piles of baggage, and the cat was monarch of all he surveyed. Growling fiercely and sliding almost from end to end of the car in a vain effort to find egress, the infuriated cat kept up a reign of terror. The messenger secured his revolver, but the traveller begged that he would not kill his property. Conductor Algie ordered that the door of the car be opened and the animal allowed to escape, and finally this was effected and the cat, with the train travelling at fifty miles an hour, slunk up onto the platform and leaped from the car.

With mighty springs it crossed fences and fields and was soon lost in the woods about Chatsworth.—Hal-

To Cure Fever, Chills, Ague.

We know of no remedy so reliable as Nerviline. Twenty drops taken in hot water three times daily not only stops the chills but destroys the disease completely. Nerviline has a direct action on ague and chills and removes their exciting causes. In stomach and bowel disorders Nerviline has held first place for nearly fifty years. It's powerful, swift to act, thorough, and perfectly safe.
Being pleasant to take it's popular with everybody. Your druggist sells Polson's Nerviline in large 25c., bottles; satisfaction guaranteed.

A TWO CENT STAMP.

One of the Post Office Inspectors paid Walkerton a visit the end of last week to investigate a matter that had come to the knowledge of the authorities, in respect to mailing a letter bearing a postage stamp that had already been used. It may seem a small matter to take so much trouble about a two cent stamp. But the importance of protecting the mail from abuse is very great, and heavy penalties are prescribed for violating the law in respect to using cancelled stamps. The Inspector traced the matter to a married woman living within a few miles of Walkerton.
She admitted the offence, but said that she had received the stamp from a person in Walkerton, whose name is somewhat notorious in connection with numerous shady transactions.
He denied it of course, and apparently left the impression on the mind of the Inspector that he is a very nice man indeed. The woman firmly maintains that he wrote a letter for her and gave her the stamp to post it. The stamp would not stick, so she got mucilage on it at another place down town. Nothing can shake her statement that she got the letter and stamp from the person referred to. What further steps the Inspector may take about the matter has not yet transpired.—Bruce Her-church choir and others will also contribute to the evening's entertainment.

Doors open at 6:30. Refreshments served during the evening. Admission 10 and 15c. Everybody welcomed.

USELESS OLD MEN.

Come, let us kill the old men off, they're only in the way;
The young men are the ones we need, and they alone should sway.
There's poor old Tolstoi; how unwise and mean his actions are Compared with those of Nicholas, the glorious young Czar.

Let every man be chloroformed when he has reached three-score, He has no right to linger on, his usefulness is o'er.
How grand the world might be to-day, if Gladstone, Tennyson, Grim Bismarck and great Hugo all had died at forty-one.

Turn out the fossils! Give the boys a chance to write and rule; A man at fifty is no man—he's but a headstrong fool.
There England trails away behind—her ruler's old, poor thing!
But see how Spain looms at the front, with her sublime young King.

CANADIANS GONE SOUTH.

How the Republic Absorbs the Men of the Northern Zone.

"Statistics are heavy dry goods," said Dr. S. Morley Wickett, in opening his address at the Empire Club in Toronto, on "Canadians in the United States." In a certain sense migrations were the history of a people. They were different to day than in centuries past, when whole tribes and nations pushed westward.
Now migration was a matter of individual concern. The nation loses valuable developing forces. The individual migrating finds himself a better field.

The data on which he based his remarks were somewhat incomplete, being taken from the United States census returns. In 1900 there were 10,556, 000 foreigners in the United States. Of these 181,000 were Canadian-born, forming 11.4 per cent of the foreign population. Among these 295,000 were French-Canadians. There were also 40,000, Dr. Wickett estimated, of Canadian parentage, and 812,000, whom he would not count, having one Canadian parent. There were, therefore, 986,000 English-Canadians and 636,000 French-Canadians across the line. As every Canadian cost $1,000 to nourish and educate, it might be considered that Canada had an investment in the Republic of $1,500,000,000.

English-Canadians to the extent of three-fourths marry in the States, while the French take their wives from Canada.

The Canadian immigration to the States had increased from 6.6 per cent. in 1850 to 11.4 per cent. in 1900, while the Irish had fallen from 42 per cent. to 15 per cent. The increase since 1880 of Canadians had been 20 per cent, while that of all foreign immigration was only 12 per cent.

Contrary to belief, most of the Canadians went to the country or smaller towns. Dr. Wickett quoted the figures for the chief cities, with Chicago at 34,479, which might be doubled when those of Canadian descent were reckoned. Boston and Cambridge had 62, 000; Detroit, 29,000; New York, 21,000.
English-Canadians were found in the North Atlantic and North Central States chiefly. California had 29,000, and Colorado 10,000.

The loss to Canada in fifty years amounted to 3,250,000, equal to a money value of $3,000,000,000. The speaker thought that the return migration to Canada had only just begun, and was an important element.

The decline in birth rate in Ontario he believed was not actual, as the only safe basis of calculation was in relation to the people of marriageable age.
The younger people were being drawn away from Ontario, and the supposed decline was little more than a surmise based on the observation that families are smaller than formerly.

A Serious Problem.

Under the heading of "Where will the men come from?" The Canadian Military Gazette of February 28th has the following remarks:

"Do we fully realize what providing twenty-five hundred additional permanent soldiers means in a country like Canada? We have at present an organized permanent force of somewhere in the neighborhood of a thousand men, with authority for the establishment of as many more. Well, what about this force? Why, it is vastly under strength to-day. That being the case, how can we look to get three times as many well-trained men of good physique to man the forts at Halifax and Esquimalt?

"We are pouring forth our thousands like water to induce immigrants to come to Canada, well knowing that our great natural resources require men for their exploitation, and yet we will soon be called upon to take well on to three thousand men of the very pick of the young manhood of this country and to lock them away in non-productive employment.

"Can it be done on present rates of pay? We think not, and if to get the men the pay must be largely increased, can two millions per annum make the bill? The change may be all right—the majority think it is so—but it is a great change, none the less, and many difficulties will have to be met and overcome before it is satisfactorily accomplished."
