A joke from real life took place at one of the stations the other day. A rather seedy looking middle-aged man a trifle thick of speech, was bemoaning his fate. He said he was from Harriston and claimed to have lost his baggage, which was a small parcel. A bystander asked how he had come to lose his baggage and got this reply: "Why man, the cark came out."—Mt. Forest Rep. The man was from Harriston—about ten miles from it, he was middle aged because of the delay in shunting about the water tank trying to back to the station, and the cark was pulled out while "corkscrewing" around the "Y." The thickness of voice was probably caused by the dense fog arising from Murphy's dam.—Harriston Review.
