

ANDREW CARNEGIE

The Most Philanthropic of the World's Millionaires.

(From the Toronto Globe.)

Mr. Andrew Carnegie is probably one of the best known among living men so far as his name and the leading features of his remarkable career are concerned.

FAMOUS PEOPLE BY FANNIE M. LOTHROP

LILY DOUGALL The Novelist and Her Work.

In the old homestead, "Ivy Cottage," nestling under the shadow of Mount Royal, Montreal, Lily Dougall, one of Canada's most notable novelists, was born in 1858.

able as the working mechanic has been, and is, and always will be, yet he is disposed to accept narrow views of affairs, for he is generally well along in years when he comes into power.

ed that he would attend every Saturday in his library and give to working boys and young men books from his shelves. He had only about four hundred volumes, but I doubt if ever so small a number of books was put to a better use.

On the same subject he wrote once for publication in a Scottish journal as follows:—"The accumulation of millions is usually the result of enterprise and judgment, and some exceptional ability or organization. It does not come from savings in the ordinary sense of the word.

Mr. Carnegie does not neglect the practical philanthropy of the moment in his devotion to educational charities. The present disaster in San Francisco appealed instantly to his sympathies, and he forwarded $100,000 to the relief fund.

CHRONICLES BY THE KHAN.

Patent Medicine.

It's mighty hard to know jes' what's the right thing to do sometimes," quoth Old Twilight, as his namesake deepened in the cook shanty.

"A feller will study at the bible an' study at the bible, an' study at it an' study at it, till he goes off his nut an' kills his wife and family with an axe."

"Every now and then a body gits an overdose of patent medicine an' turns up his toes. But that's no good and sufficient reason why patent medicines should be prohibited.

"Even if you ain't able to read the directions on the lid it doesn't folly that anybody need be fool enough to swally the whole box at once."

"A chap goes out with a gun an' shoots up a few of his neighbors. Does it folly that it would be wise to disarm the hull community—eh?"

"There's a fool born every minute, an' they air all around us. You don't know what they're goin' to do. There's not a moment of time day or night but your life an' property is in a danger from a fool of some kind."

"The question is, kin ye legislate fer a fool? No' ye can't! All ye can do is to put your trust in God. You don't know that there's a fool out with an automobile, er a gun, er a fas' horse—yiv got to keep yer eye skinned, that's all."

"There's one thing about Canadianians, they'll eat most anything that comes along. You could reduce the populations of this great confederation by several million by sendin' a package uv pizen candy to every household. The favorite way of killin' folks a few years ago was to send them some pizen chocolate."

"Nowadays Mr. Catharan Medishi will stroll through the market an' drop into everybody's wagon a envelope containin' samples uv his headache powders, liver and kidney tablets, et cetera, an' a week after that there are various funerals—but how're ye going to stop it?"

"I tell ye, there's a fool born every minute—an' all the laws on earth wouldn't fizzle on a fool."

He Wouldn't Change His Shirt.

He wore each shirt a fortnight.

As boy, and youth and man, And when he married Bella.

He wouldn't change his plan. She undertook improvements.

Her power she did exert; He'd do most anything she asked, But he wouldn't change his shirt.

He wore a brand-new collar Each morning of his life; It cut his very soul, his neck.

Was hacked as with a knife. He kept his long goat-like beard.

Quite free from soil and dirt, He combed his hair before each meal.

But he wouldn't change his shirt.

He put his trouser-legs outside The cowhide boots he wore; The mandate that he take a bath.

He quite serenely bore; He learned to lift his hat and bow.

Till he was quite expert; But this would always raise a row— He wouldn't change his shirt.

She wrote her Ma an' told her Of all she had to bear.

An' on th' maternal shoulder, She cast her load of care.

"He ceased at my express desire Tobacco juice to squirt, But one thing fills my heart with ire—

He will not change his shirt."

"He goes with me to meetin'— An' humbly takes a part; He leads in prayer, an' 'tis I know—

He's got a change of heart. That's something, to be sure, but oh! I'm still with trouble girt; Although he's got a change of heart, He hasn't changed his shirt!"

One day with axe on shoulder laid He went to fell a tree.

It burst his crust; I trust it must Have done it painlessly.

They brought him home upon a slab, His wife was all alert, And when he croaked she "laid him out"

—And proudly changed his shirt!

Sciatica Cured After Twenty Years of Torture.

For more than twenty years Mr. J. B. Massey, of 3322 Clinton St., Minneapolis, Minn., was tortured by sciatica.

The pain and suffering which he endured during this time is beyond comprehension.

Nothing gave him any relief until he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm.

One application of that liniment relieved the pain and made sleep and rest possible, and less than one bottle has affected a permanent cure.

If troubled with sciatica or rheumatism why not try a 25-cent bottle of Pain Balm and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain.
