MISS DEBORAH PASSMORE.

An Able Artist in the Employ of the Government.

In the division of pomology of the department of agriculture are reproduced in water color studies the choice varieties of fruits that are sent in from all over the country.

Chief of the little corps of artists doing this work for the government is Miss Deborah Passmore, who is widely known for the accuracy and the beauty of her work. Her water color "portraits" of rare apricots, peaches, plums, grapes and various other fruits are not only technically perfect and therefore of value to the scientific world, but they are really works of art. It is remarkable how she succeeds in catching the very texture of the skin as well as the color and form of the fruit.

MISS DEBORAH PASSMORE.

hard, smooth surface of a winter apple, the fuzzy cheek of a peach, the pebbled grain of a pear—all are so realistically shown that the fruit stands out from the sheet as if one could pick it up. Yet Miss Passmore is a rapid worker, and the files of the division contain portfolios filled with the output of her brushes. Throughout the department and in the fields where her work has long been recognized as probably the finest that has ever been achieved it excites the greatest admiration and enthusiasm.

Miss Passmore was an artist of unusual ability before she entered the government work and has a large collection of pictures, both in oils and water colors, on the walls of her attractive home. She came to Washington some twenty years ago and established herself as a teacher, having classes composed largely of young women in diplomatic circles. She has been in the department for twelve years, during which time she has acquired the remarkable skill for which she is so well known.—Washington Post.

Why Ashamed of Work? "A woman who will work and has no false pride about declaring herself a business woman is usually successful," said a prominent man recently, "but I never knew one that committed the folly of apologizing for earning her bread or endeavoring to hide the fact that she was in business that did not make a failure."

What would be said of a man who thought so meanly of his occupation or of himself for being engaged in it that he continually offered excuses for not passing his life in idleness? asks the Chicago Inter Ocean.

This feeling of reserve is one of the chief obstacles to be overcome by the average woman forced to a consideration of the question of earning a livelihood, and the sooner we realize the fact that all work that supplies a legitimate want is honorable the nearer will be the solution of the financial problem so often a menace to the happiness of the individual and the home.

The great law of supply and demand is the chief factor of success in the world of business. That a woman should offer to help fill a demand and receive a just remuneration therefor is not a thing to be ashamed of.

teeth than it is time to begin to think about the second. The first permanent teeth come when the child is from five to seven, and as they are the four molars which come beyond the last molars of the temporary set they are often mistaken for the first teeth. As soon as they appear the child should be taken to the dentist to see if they are regular in their position.

If the teeth do not come in perfectly even and regular a dentist can remedy defects which it is impossible to change after they have been neglected a few years. The dentist should also be seen even before a first tooth is taken out, as if it is removed too soon the jaw contracts and the tooth which comes in its place is crowded.

Care given to the first set is as important as care to the second, and a soft brush should be used twice a day from the time the child is a baby. Tooth powder is not necessary to keep children's teeth in good order. Rinsing the mouth at night with a little linewater and cleaning often enough with soft water are a better preservative than a dentifrice.

Opposing Labor Savers.

If woman did not oppose the introduction of electricity in the kitchen her work would be easier, is the startling statement made by the writer of "The Electric Housekeeper" in the Technical World Magazine. Says he: "It would be ungalant, certainly unpleasant and possibly dangerous, to make too clear the parallel between the farmer and the average housekeeper. Yet it is a fact that it is harder to introduce a labor saving device in the kitchen than anywhere else. The successful manufacturer goes far afield to find anything which will cut down the labor necessary for the making of his product, but the head of the average private food factory sticks to her old ways and her old appliances with a devotion which goes far toward accounting for the truth of the old proverb that 'woman's work is never done.'

"Not one woman in a hundred thousand has yet begun to realize that the best maid of all work on earth is the little copper wire which brings the electric current into her home for lighting purposes."

The Breakfast Room Desk.

No breakfast room is so cozy as the one which contains a well appointed and well stocked desk in the sunniest window, ready to turn to for the immediate answering of the mail which has been perused at breakfast. Englishwomen, who understand the art of letter and note writing better than any women in the world, follow this plan and have certain other customs which come under the class of letter writing made easy.

Letter paper is bought by the quantity, stamps are bought by the hundred and pens by the gross, any of which outlays would be considered an unheard of extravagance by the ordinary American woman, who buys her writing materials in dribbles that are small and stingy as compared with her lavish expenditures in other directions.

It wasn't a Missouri editor but a printer's devil who was going through his first experience in "making up" forms. The paper was late and the boy got the galley mixed. The first part of the obituary notice of a peculiar citizen was dumped in the forms, and the next handful of type came off a galley describing a recruit fire. It read like this: "The palbraters lowered the body to the grave and as it was consigned to the flames there were few if any regrets for the old wreck had been an eye-sore to the town for years. Of course there was individual loss but that was fully covered by insurance."

The widow thinks the editor wrote the obituary that way because the late partner of her joys and sorrows owed him five years' subscription.

THE LIBEL SUIT.

In connection with the great cement industry at Durham, Grey County, Editor Irwin, of the Chronicle, put up a gallant fight in defence of his town and the shareholders. He happened to hit an official job on the solar plexus and a libel suit followed, which cost the plucky, patriotic Editor over $1300. The people who benefitted by the Chronicle's courageous fight have contributed over $700 of the above amount, but it is to be hoped that they will put up every dollar and a nice tidy sum more as a token of their appreciation. Mr. Irwin should not be allowed to suffer the loss of one dollar. His paper, the Chronicle, is a credit not only to Durham but to the Province.

Talking about newspaper libel suits reminds us of a fight a certain Ontario Journal once put up on behalf of certain persons not only in its own particular constituency but throughout the Province. A libel suit resulted and it cost the newspaper over $1200 to settle it. Did the people who benefitted by the newspaper's fight rush to the rescue with contributions to help the publisher out? They did not. Yes, the truth must be told—they allowed the newspaper to take all the hard whacks and then laughed in their sleeves. But it is a long lane that has no turning, and years afterwards, when the championship of a newspaper would have meant thousands of dollars to the man who refused to help a poor devil of an editor in his extremity, on their own account, these same men actually had the audacity and momentary gall to solicit the help of the man whom they had allowed to size up on the financial gridiron for years in paying off the costs of a libel suit incurred in their behalf. The editor's reply is unprintable, but it was equal to the occasion, and we firmly believe the recording angel failed to chalk it up against him in the Book of Life.—Burk's Falls Arrow.

When Seven Men Die.

You know at least one of them, and Consumption. At first it was only catarrh—but it was neglected. When "Catarrhazone" cures so quickly it's foolish to suffer—it's a shame to keep on sniffling and hawking. Catarrhazone goes direct to the cause of the disease,—that's why it's so dead certain to cure. It stops the cough, prevents that disgusting discharge, clears phlegm out of the throat in five minutes. Very pleasant and safe too; get Catarrhazone from your druggist to day.

A WALKERTON FREAK

The editor, publisher and proprietor of the great freddie journal, who by the way of parenthesis we might observe, is one and the same person, met with a rather unusual experience on Monday evening of this week, one that illustrates the old saying that it takes a lot of people to make a world. It was after this sort. One day last week, a former resident of the town came back to be married, and we have reason to believe was married. In the ordinary prosecution of our business of news gathering, we called at the home of the parents of the bride, which home is located a few doors south of the Pett biscuit factory, to get a few pointers regarding this important event. But the bride's mother absolutely and emphatically declined to be interviewed on the subject. What she said was that she objected to having her private affair made the subject of public gossip. Now, we have been writing up weddings, on and off, for twenty years, and never before have we met with a mother of a bride who took a position of that kind. The rule is for the mother of the bride to greet the reporter with the glad hand, give him a piece of the wedding cake and about her times as much information as he wants, or has room for in his paper. But there are exceptions to every rule and why shouldn't there be to this one? And come to think of it, why shouldn't a young woman get married if she wants to without everybody talking about it? Any way these strong minded individuals, who are capable of rising above the influence of custom or fashion, provide an interesting exception to the dull uniformity of ordinary humanity.—Walkerton Telescope.

An exchange gives this hint to anglers: The boy wanted some worms for bait. He had selected a promising spot, a shady and low lying dell, but though he had been digging now for a quarter of an hour, not a single worm had his spade turned up. "Here sonny," said an old angler, "take this chunk of soap and make me a quart or two of soap-suds." The boy brought the suds, the old man sprinkled them over the ground and then he, in his turn began to dig. It was amazing. Here where the boy before had not found a single worm the old man now discovered them in dozens. "You can find worms 'most anywhere, sonny," said the old man, "if you wet the ground with soap-suds first. The soap-suds draws them, the same as molasses draws flies. A weak mixture of blue vitriol and water will do the same thing also."
