Study the Goose.

There is much to study about the goose. Just observe a flock of geese some day when you are visiting on a farm. They'll give you amusement by the hour.

A goose hasn't the slightest idea of breadth or depth. The assertion that every goose that passes through an open barn door ducks its head, no matter if the opening be twenty feet high, is as true as can be, and, while a goose can's be made to believe that there is no danger to its head as it passes over the sill of a barn door, it is equally positive that it can creep through a two inch augur hole or a Is there a fullness in your stomach knothole in a fence just as easily as well after regulating with Dr. Ham- enough for a team of horses to pass

Laughter and Indigestion.

"I don't know whether nature fitted me out with a different sort of digestive apparatus from the average man," remarked a magazine reader, who looked up from the printed page. "Here is a writer who sets it down as a solemn fact that 'laughter and good cheerare enemies of dyspepsia.' Now, whenever I go to a dinner where a lot of good stories are told or amusing speeches made and laugh more than usual the result for me is an aggravated attack of indigestion. More than this, and, al though I never drink anything in the way of intoxicants, I am certain to have an attack of hiccoughs as a result of laughing, which always amuses my friends who are aware of my nondrinking habits. I present the anomalous picture of perhaps be-A lot of sorry looking chickens, ing the only man at the table who dogs and c ts loafed in the black, ill has not taken a drink of any kind, smelling yard of the great chemical and yet my actions are those of a man who had decidedly too much
