Stanley's Easter Tree.

Stanley Ober stood at the window looking across the meadow at the mall evergreens that skirted the wood beyond and wishing it were Christmas time again, for the tree and been such a delight, but it was learly Easter, and there would be Easter eggs and Easter cards and a mall party, when all the cousins vould be there.

"Mamma!" he cried suddenly.

"Well?" asked mamma. Stanley went nearer and talked arnestly for several minutes. Then namma's face wore a smile, and tanley was beaming and mysterious. The party came off on Easter Monlay, and all the cousins were there. A merry time they had of it, with all orts of Easter games, and then came ea, with pretty sandwitches and akes and ices and fruit, and then a oor was opened into another room there stood a tree hung with the host charming of Easter tokens Dainty baskets of flowers, one for ach guest; painted eggs suspended y gay ribbons, beautiful cards and omemade trifles, and at the top of the tree were sprays of lovely Easter lies that looked so pure and white gainst their background of dark

The Easter tree was a great suc ess, and the cousins voted Stanley's aster party to be the most delight Il they had ever known .- Youth's companion.

A Quaint Old Custom.

A very peculiar English custom hose origin it is difficult to trace is at of "heaving" practiced on Easter londay and Tuesday Men would lave or lift women seated in chairs ove their heads and women would ave men in similar fashion. Those no refused to be heaved or to heave d to pay a fine. Sometimes men d women would hide away to es pe the ordeal and the fine, and at nes the result was disastrous-as, r instance, in the case referred to Taylor in his manuscripts:

1548 9. This yere & the tuesday er Ester hollydays two yonge n of Salop whose names were Ed onde Reynolds & Robart Clarke re smothered under the hiding selves from mayds the hill fal: he part the rof upon them."

There may have been many others o suffered more from evading the aving but history is silent about bm - New York Press.
