was silent, realizing, perhaps, that it was she who was on the point of making herself ridiculous. But she twitch-ed aside her dress with such an air of disgust as Elspeth meekly passed to the seat which had been cleared by the porter that the unfortunate newcomer felt that she was regarded

"I am sorry," she said, looking

"Please don't be. It doesn't matter in the least," answered the beautiful creature, with a smile so charming that Elspeth's heart warmed to her.

"I'm sure she's as nice as she's pretty," the typist said to herself,

"though how she can be, with such a

The intruder smiled a grateful answer, and then tried to appear oblivious to her traveling companions.

She opened her handbag, which she had on her lap, and pretended to be deeply interested in its contents, but she could not help hearing their conversation. It was all but time for the train to start now, and the elder of the two ladies, apparently forgetting the unwelcome third in the compartment, did not attempt to conceal her

"What a shame! I believe he's not coming," she exclaimed, looking eagerly out of the window. "Another minute, and it will be too late.

I do hope Lady Melton's news wasn't a mistake or made up out of the whole cloth, and our time wasted. It would be like her. I always did think Maud

"Mother, do be careful," whispered

"What do I care for a person of that sort?" asked the other, with a quick glance of contempt at pretty, plainly-dressed Elspeth. "It's bad enough having her stuffed in with us, maid matters; indeed, she is probably someone's maid. What is the use of spending a lot of money to travel first-class, if third-class creatures are to be squeezed in, without

"Here comes Mr. Kenrith," broke Instantly an extraordinary change came over her mother. The handsome, though rather sharp features, were softened with a charming smile, which irradiated them as the rose of a sun-set glow irradiates a bleak landscape in the north. The dark eyes sparkled, the frown that had drawn the straight black brows together was smoothed out. She looked suddenly almost girlish and prettily feminine as she patted her beautifully undu-

Elspeth, though angry, was interested, wondering what sort of man would appear. The name, Kenrith, sounded faintly familiar, as if she had heard it before, but if so she could

"We are delighted. You won't let us be dull," replied Lady Lambart.

in the girl, as if thankful to make a as some inferior sort of animal.

straight at the girl.

mother, is a miracle.'

Melton a cat."

her daughter.

paying a penny?'

Biz! tal Parlors

Drug Store is of Ices and Fancy Drinks STYLE

& Saturday

Beautiful Roses with every

UG STORE.

aw a great big chance of the curtain business means to us far more you, lace curtains at

Down Prices

0 men during the next

g down the prices of

make a good last im-rst impression. They gligee, and working,

er's samples of the new vn panama and chiff-

w styles, pleated and

0 skirts—on sale $4.25

S from Ireland!

ke linen. Firm, even o 60e yard. Colored

5c yard. Fancy linen

rs, including browns,

e are still about 250

each enough to cover room. Short ends to

RELAND

r "Mechanic King"

g" overalls.

Block.

ends of Carpet

ck, 50c yard.

e to 35e vard.

LINS

LLER'S SAMPLE

SKIRTS

dish. 600 Roses to be )rchestra

ersary

hear the Music at Framing on shortesi NE 20, 1908 notice.

ne 25, 1908

A. BELL

and

eral Director

DERTAKER

of Catholic Robes, and black

ite Caps for aged people.

mbalming a Specialty

easonable Goods w in Stock

> Ginghams Chambrays Dimities Organdies Muslins Persian and Under Linen Delainettes Dress Linen Victoria Lawns New dress goods Wnite underskirts Black satin

Ladies' coatings need stick at the price. incoats for ladies and entlemen, all new and Men & Boys p-to-date goods.

People's Mills

ECLIPSE of 1 Manitoba and 1 Ontario t and is a strictly first class family flour.

SOVEREIGN

re Manitoba flour, made from Manitoba wheat cannot be beat ther bakers or domestic use.

PASTRY FLOUR

ande from selected winter whea. a superior article for maing pastry, etc.

WE KEEP Have you got your soChopped Oats, Mixed Chop, Pea > enal Reduction on Flour in 5 and flushing. 10 Bag Lots.

op, Bean Shorts and Feed Flour.

dopping Done Every Day TRY OUR NEW CHOPPER.

all us up by telephone No. S. ands of Grain bought at Market Price.

John McGowan.

adies' cotton vests, without otton hose or ladies and child-summer corsets and girdle cor-

Children's underwaists in white

Muslin ginghams @ 10c per yd.

Sheetings, pillow cotton, table

Men's oxfords, congress, bals.

Women's coarse boots, oxfords slippers, box calf, bals., pat-

Children's exfords, slippers, box calf bals., dongolas & canvas.

all kinds of boots and shoes at fresh groceries always on hand.

1,000 doz. eggs wanted this wk.

ren, loc and upwards,

sets @ 40c and 50c pair.

linen at lowest prices.

bluchers, split and peb.

and drab, 25c.

ots and Shoes

tent bluchers.

lowest prices.

Bulk teas a specialty.

Bring us your eggs.

dummer Hardware!

re in the Hardware Store!

s a pleasure by buying eapples should have a

able by using some of will thrive on pasture ble growing potatoes r bug finish or Paris es, snaths, sickles and cythes from 25c up to this year than we did on account of having vire on hand.

ing at bargains, from supply our customers arriving nearly every rack. Place your order

THE GHOST OF LOCHRAIN CASTLE

BY MRS. C. N. WILLIAMSON

Author of "The Princess Passes," "The Lightning Conductor," Etc., Etc.

Copyright, 1906, by Mrs. C. N. Williamson.

CHAPTER I.

to go again into the Agency to ask the ROOMS-Next to Swallows same question: "Is there anything for me?" and to hear the same anher Shop. RESIDENCE—Next swer, "Nothing to-day." She hesitated South of W. J. Lawrence's at the door a moment, but she had come out on purpose to make the call, and it was a confession of failure to steal away discouraged.

Elspeth hated to fail, so she summoned up her courage and marched would not willingly have changed hers for the Scotch express. (which was attractive, even in a greenish lodging house mirror, with had been taken once to Scotland to a crack across the middle) for that | see the place where she was born, but other, in spite of the material advan- she had not been there since. Her fatages which might go with it.

woman with the expression cut her ly penniless, therefore Elspeth knew | doesn't matter any more than one's toward the door, succeeded instantly small, and later he could never afford by a fishlike gaze of discouragement for the applicant who followed on Elspeth's heels. A small boy in livery, sitting by the door in question, knocked, mentioned the name of Miss Dean, and after a murmur from some one unseen, invited Elspeth to pass through. Miss Smith, the manager of the Agency, looked up from a pile of let-

was expecting you," she remarked. could be found for her. Neither was time. How would you like to go up to | compartments, by the time the porter Scotland, and be a kind of secretary who had registered her box and taken Elspeth's gray eyes opened. She had for a seat. dreamed of nothing more exciting than a place in a London office, and it had appeared enormously difficult to get even that. But Scotland-dear, big Hydro! It seemed too good to be porter broke in reassuringly: true. She was almost sure it would | "Thet's all right. Miss; they'll have end in nothing, but she did not show to let you. There's no room in the her lack of faith in her attainments | thirds or seconds, and they're bound and her luck; she was far too shrewd to carry you." a girl in spite of her inexperience, to make such a mistake.

"I should like it, I think," she said came to a compartment occupied only with creditable calmness. 'Exactly what would I have to do?"

"Well, it's not quite an ordinary secretarial position," replied Miss Smith. "You would have to take down the manager's letters from dictation, of course. Let me see, what's your rate per minute?"

"A hundred and thirty words is my average speed. I can do a hundred and fifty for a spurt." "Good. But I believe you have only had home practice as yet." "I used to work from my brother's dictation. He could hardly speak too i

"One doesn't lose one's head with on hand the best brands one's brother. Whereas with strangers, lled Oats. Also our make of and a great many strangers at whose ereal, the best on the market. beck and call you'd have to be, you'd find it different."

"If you think I am too inexperienced for the place"- began Elspeth

"Frankly, I do think you too inexods delivered anywhere in towr. perienced, but you seem a quickwitted, sensible girl, who ought to get on; and the manager of Lochrain Castle Hydro makes it a point that the person engaged shall be Scotch. well-educated, a lady, not over twenty-five, and-er-prepossessing. p-to-date flour and feed and You happen at this moment to be the keep our flour for sale. If only young Scotchwoman I have or procer does not keep it come to my books as a stenographer. Other and we will use you right. wise I should have preferred some onmore experienced and nearer the age limit mentioned.'

"I'm twenty-two." said Elspeth. "And look nineteen, but it can't be helped. Mr. McGowan wants some one at once. If you go, you'll have to start to-morrow. Can you do that?"

"Easily." replied Elspeth, who lived in one room, and whose worldly possessions would all go into a box not too large for use as a cabin trunk. "You say it isn't an ordinary place. What is there to do besides attending to the manager's correspondence?"

"His correspondence would prob ably be the least part of your work as there's already a young man who helps with that; but he has other duties, bookkeeping and so on, and can't devote his whole time to correspondence. A local young woman was tried. but failed, and a new person is wanted in a hurry, because there are gue t in the hotel who need secretaria: work done, and haven't brought their own secretaries. That is why I said you would have to be at the beck and and she did not look half so handcall of a good many strangers; authors, clergymen, politicians, financiers perhaps-oh, all sorts of .peo-

"I think that would be very in-"Yes; but distracting and confus- are already full of luggage, and we teresting," said Elspeth.

ing. People of that sort have one need the disengaged seat for our ways, and are often impatient, and pard to please. You would need tact s well as presence of mind. However, i's a great chance. You couldn't have oped for anything half as good, with our inexperience. Lochrain Castle lydro is new as a hotel, opened only his season, and one of the finest in cotland. The salary is two guineas week, and you're sure to have presnts. But mind, you must do us credit. don't want Mr. McGowan to think 've made a mistake. That would be a advertisement for the Agency." "I will do my best," said Eispeth, whom a weekly two guineas seem-a fortune. She had lived on fifteen illings a week for two years, since or father had died, and her brother now In Australia seeking his fortune) had insisted on giving her the whole of that father's pension as a Major Elspeth Dean was almost ashamed in the Seventieth Scottish Borderers. London, and her training as a shorthand writer and typist, had strained her resources, and for months she had been trying in vain for work, calling very day at several agencies.

In a few minutes everything was arranged, and Miss Smith was able o send a satisfactory telegram to the nanager of the Lochrain Castle Hy-Iropathic Hotel. Elspeth went home o her lodgings, packed up her type-The same young woman sat at the vriter, which she had bought on the same desk, with the same rather wasp- 'instalment plan." and all her other ish expression on her face. Elspeth belongings. Her railway ticket was would have envied her a little for her baid for by her new employer, and secure position in life, if it had not the next morning she was at Euston been for that expression. But Elspeth Station, one small unit in a crowd When Elspeth was a little girl, she ther's people had never forgiven him "Good morning. Is there" -- she for marrying a pretty girl somewhere without having to think about her, had begun as usual, when the young beneath him in station, and absolute- with every word one speaks. She nothing about them. Major Dean had "The manager will see you in her left his son and daughter at school in private room," she said, with a nod a syburb of London when they were to take Elspeth out to India. She had lone very little traveling in her life, and was much excited this morning The had not dreamed that there would be so many people going by train, though—she told herself—she might have thought of it, as Town was now 'dead," and everybody running up to Scotland for what was left of August and September.

Elspeth had a third class ticket, but "Ah, Miss Dean, it's you, is it? I the crush was so great that no place "You generally come in about this there anything left in the second class charge of her handbag began to search

"You'll have to go first class, Miss," The girl demurred.

"But they won't let me, and I can't beautiful Scotland in August, and a afford"- she had begun, when the

They hurried from door to door, but everything was full.

surmouted with a coronet) and a dust-coat or two. But the porter was

"These places all taken, madam?"

he asked briskly of the elder lady, a very handsome woman, whose admirers would have pronounced her thirty-three, whose enemies would ter, and stared haughtily at Elspeth who was with her interrupted:

aren't quite sure about that."

She glanced up from reading a let-

"Yes-" she began, when the girl

"Oh, mother, it is only one seat be-

The other frowned with vexation, some, or nearly so young, when she snapped, in a low but angry voice.

Then, to the porter: "There is no room here. Don't you see, the racks where," replied the man, already beginning to find space for the gorgeous the lady, flushing deeply under a delicate film of liquid powder, and a veil which heightened its flower-like ef-

"Oh, mother, don't!" implored the girl, her face-which Elspeth thought the prettiest she had ever seen-scarlet with humilation and distress. "See,

The elder woman bit her lip and

"Impudent creature!" exclaimed dressing bags in the racks.

fect. "I am the Coun-" ourselves."

"You are ridiculous, Hilary!" she side ours that is engaged, and we have placed her past forty.

not easily beguiled.

and the porter.

frowned.

In another second her curiosity was satisfied. A tall, broad-shouldered man of about forty, with a nice brown face, was at the door. They hurried from door to door, but "Here I am, just in time," said he in a pleasant voice, which proclaimed everything was full, until at last they him from the north country. "May I really travel with you, Lady Lambart and Lady Hilary?"

lated auburn hair.

not remember where.

The new comer glanced at Elspeth, as if expecting to find that she was an acquaintance also, saw she was a stranger, and begging her pardon as he passed took the unoccupied seat. By this time the young typist knew why the name of Kenrith had sounded familiar. She had never heard it, but she had read about it in the papers. There was a millionaire named John Kenrith, who was very charitable, and whose good works she had seen mentioned. If she remembered aright, he came from Lancashire, and she wondered if this nice, brown, rather ugly man were he. "If he is, I do believe this horrid woman is being sweet to him on account of brown, rather ugly man were he. "If his money," thought the girl, "for he doesn't seem her sort at all. I do hope he sees through her. He looks We have opened up a funeral clever, but I suppose men never do see through handsome women, espeis one, because now I come to look her dressing bag.' Elspeth had brought a novel, and plies. she tried to absorb herself in it, as the train rushed her on toward exciting new experiences; but the talk of her traveling companions would entangle itself with that of the characters in the book. "It was such a pleasant surprise to hear, after we had made up our by two ladies. To be sure the remainminds to go to Lochrain, that you ing seats were covered with small lugwere going," said Lady Lambart. "I gage, a courle of smart dressing-bags couldn't resist writing you a line, with gold monograms (one of them when I heard you were at the Carlton, to ask if there were any chance of your traveling by our train. Then, when I didn't get an answer"-

"I was away from town all yesterday, and only found your note when I got back to the hotel at midnight, too late to wire; but of course I sent a messenger the first thing this morning"-

"We must have already left. It is such a long drive, you know, and Hilary and I have heaps of luggage. But all's well that ends well. Who would have dreamed of your going to Lochrain? I thought of it because the air is so good, and it's been such a tiring season that it will be more restful for us both than a round of Scotch visits." "I think I'm in great luck," said

Mr. Kenrith. "You poor fellow, I suppose you really do think so," mused Elspeth. "'Surprised,' indeed! I wonder she dared say that, after what she must have known I heard when I first got into the carriage. What a scene there Very sorry, madam, but this is would be if I told!" This idea struck her sense of humthe only compartment with a place free, and this lady must ride someor so comically that she almost laughed aloud; but nobody was paying any attention to her. Kenrith looked her way occasionally, to be sure, but not curiously to see if she were listening. He was not saying anything that he need mind all the world hearing; and his glances toward Elspeth expressed only the interest that a warm-hearted man of an unusually kind and sympathetic nature would feel in a pretty young woman traveling alone, almost shabhe is making room. We can't expect bily dressed, when her beauty ought to have the whole compartment to to have been set off by charming I (To be continued.)

HARDWARE AND FURNITURE.

Wire Fencing and Wire Goods

We are agents for the well and favorably known "Frost Woven Wire Fence"-The fence of quality and service. All horizontals are of No. 9 hard steel-coiled spring wire, and all uprights of No. 7 wire. It is a fence well worthy of inspection.

See also our "Frost Coiled Spring Wire,"

"Frost Gates" in all lengths. Poultry Netting 2 ft. to 6 ft. in height. Screen Doors of different sizes and qualities, Window Screens etc., etc.

Lawn, Garden and Field Supplies

Lawn Mowers, Garden Hose of different sizes Sprays, Nozzles, Taps, Scythes, Forks, Hoes and Rakes in abundance.

Warm Weather Goods

such as Gasoline and Oil Stoves. We carry a high-grade of Gasoline,--use 'Queen Motor'

Gasoline and you will use no other.

Furniture

In this we have a full line consisting of sideboards, Tables, Couches, Chairs, Bed-room suites, Spring Mattresses, etc. Among our Mattresses are the famous 'Ostermoor' Mattresses fully guaranteed. They speak for themselves.

LENAHAN AND McINTOSH.

Funeral Directors . . AND . .

and undertaking business in cially countesses, and this evidently Priceville, and have on hand at it, that's a Countess's coronet on a full stock of funeral sup-

Embalming a Specialty

C. McMillan, F. P. Reiley.

OUR SHOE BEARS

the mark of quality from toe to heel. You know at a glance that they are footwear of high class. But style and good taste are not their only points.

Style is combined with Comfort and good taste with good leather and good shoemaking. Step in and select a pair for wear when you want to look especially nice. If you teel that way always, our shoes will fill that bill, too. They retain their shapeliness until worn out and that takes a long time and constant use.

Prices down to hard pan .- Call and enquire as a great surprise awaits you

Entricken & Sewell's

MILLINERY

Do not fail to call and see our beautiful display of summer millinery. We have over 50 hats suitable for the hot summer days. These hats are made of mohair braids, tulles, chiffon, laces, and trimmed with flowes, plumes, ribbons, wings, etc.

We always keep a very large stock of trimmed millinery, also a special selection of black hats, suitable for mourning.

Parisian Millinery Parlors,

MISS DICK Prop. For ____

Ointment, go to S. P. SAUNDERS The Harnessmaker

Machine Oil, Harness Oil,

Axle Grease and Hoof

Massey-Harris

Implements The Best in the world

Everything the farmer wants in the Implement line can be found in our Ware-rooms. Sawyer & Massey Threshers

De Laval and Massey-Harris Separators

Rubber rings for Oxford Separators See our platform scales Machine Repairs—Cash

Machine Oil and Coal Oil always in stock W. J. McFadden, Agent. Lambton Street.

C. McArthur