Advices from E. D. Arnaud, Canadian commercial agent in New York, indicate that the authorities there are becoming genuinely alarmed at the spread of the white plague in the island colony. Consumption is on the increase, as is shown by the statistics of the past few years. In 1901 there were 654 deaths from consumption in the colony. In 1902, 710 people succumbed to the disease, while in 1906, the figures had gone up to 9,332.

It is estimated that 2,000 people are idle every day of the year, involving an annual cost of nearly $1,000,000 a year to the colony. Recently all the school teachers of the island were called together in convention and given instructions by experts as to the best methods to prevent the spread of the disease.
