"Oh, I thought you would be alone by this time," she said. "You told me the hour, but" (she glanced at her bracelet watch) "I see we're a few minutes before time." "It doesn't matter; we have finished," said Kenrith. "You shall see my treasures such as they are."

"Fray, let us wait," began Lady Lambert, significantly, but Kenrith only laughed. "Miss Dean, you may perhaps remember our talking of a certain diamond in the train the other day. Now I am going to show it to Lady Lambert and Lady Hilary, also a black pearl which I have lately picked up. You shall stop and see them too."

"I—I think perhaps I had better not, thank you," stammered Elspeth, rising.

"Why, don't you like jewels?" asked Kenrith.

"Yes; but—"

"Then you must stay," said he, in his masterful voice.

The girl resisted no longer; but the idea flashed into her head that she would rather not know where the millionaire kept his valuables. There was no definite reason for this feeling, but she had it strongly. Instead of following Kenrith with her eyes as he walked to the other end of the room, she turned them upon Lady Hilary, with rather an appealing smile, as much as to say, "I do hope you don't mind me having stopped?"

But the other girl did not even see the smile. Her whole soul seemed concentrated in a gaze which was fixed upon John Kenrith, or Lady Lambert, who had walked away with her host.

Elspeth was almost startled by the look in the girl's face, which hardened it, and for a moment made it old beyond her years. The eyes were eager and feverish, the white throat visibly throbbing under its wisp of tulle. What is the matter with her? Why does she look like that? Elspeth asked herself. And then Lady Lambert exclaimed, "How extraordinary of you! Who on earth would have dreamed of your keeping them there?"

The blood suddenly streamed up to Lady Hilary's face then receded, leaving it very pale.

In spite of herself, Elspeth was curious to know what there was so

AGRICULTURAL, HORTICULTURAL, AND VEGETABLE GROWERS' MEETINGS AT CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION.

During the second week of the Toronto Exhibition there will be a number of practical and interesting meetings held in the tent of the Ontario Department of Agriculture located directly opposite the Cattle Judging Ring. These meetings will be in connection with the Agricultural and Horticultural Societies and the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association. The Executive of the Horticultural Societies' Association will convene on Tuesday, Sept. 8th, that of the Horticultural Societies' Association, on Wednesday, Sept. 9th, and that of the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association, on Thursday, Sept. 10th, the meeting each day being at 2 p.m. sharp. Short addresses on live subjects will be given each day by those present and all officers and members of the three Associations named will be cordially welcomed at these meetings. Programmes will be arranged for the Annual Conventions of the above named Associations.

An official of the Fairs and Exhibitions Branch of the Department of Agriculture will be present in the tent each day from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 4th, to Friday, Sept. 11th, and all members of the above Associations are invited to make the tent their headquarters while on the grounds.

extraordinary about the hiding place Mr. Kenrith had chosen for his jewels. She had deprived herself of the knowledge which she might have had; but whatever Lady Lambert had seen, that had Lady Hilary seen too.

CHAPTER VII.

For two nights Elspeth had a respite. Nothing happened. But as she lay awake in fearful expectation, or started out of her first sleep with her heart pounding and her forehead damp, it was not surprising that she began to lose her color and have blue circles under her eyes.

The girl knew that her face showed something of the strain she was silently enduring, but she hoped that no one would notice the change. Luckily, one would notice, nobody cared enough for her to observe too closely, not even Lady Hilary, who, though grateful to Elspeth, was naturally much absorbed in her own anxieties. But on the morning which completed the girl's first week at Lochrain Castle Hydro, Mr. McGowan's room: for her in there alone.

As Elspeth came in, he sprang up from his chair at the desk. "At last," he exclaimed, "I have a chance to see you alone. I began to think it would never come again. Not once would the second day after you arrived, when you promised me your friendship, have I had five minutes to speak to you, without McGowan, or someone else bursting in upon us."

Elspeth was rather taken aback at his manner, which gave a very different impression of the man from that which she had received on her first meeting. He had been exceedingly quiet and self-restrained then, talking to her of his employer with marked respect and reticence. Now he called the manager "McGowan," and referred to him almost truculently, as if with resentment.

as if you were the daughter of a countess, like Lady Hilary Vane, yet you are of my own class in life, and I can dare to tell you now that I have been in love with you ever since the afternoon when I drove you up from the railway station."

"That's only a week ago," stammered Elspeth, distressed and embarrassed. "You can't know your own mind in such a short time. Please forget about this. I will be your friend, of course, but—"

"Don't answer me yet," broke in the young man. "I've often heard that girls always said 'no' at first, especially if they were taken by surprise; and I didn't expect that you could have learned to love me so soon. But wait; hear what I've got to say before you speak."

"I thought you were going to let me 'rest' this morning," pleaded Elspeth. "This conversation is much more wearying, after a bad night, than attending to Mr. McGowan's correspondence. I've a headache, and—and I'm worried about lots of things."

"You need never worry about anything after this, and as I am going to ask you to do, presently. First of all I want you to promise that you will be my wife, by and by."

"Oh, I couldn't!" cried Elspeth. "I am not at all in love with you. I never could be."

"How do you know that?" asked Grant. "Unless there is some other man. Is there—is there? You must tell me that."

"You ought not to ask me such a question, but—there is no one," the girl answered. She spoke the truth. There was no man in her life, and there never had been, except her father and brother. Nevertheless, the color she had lost slowly streamed back to her face, and the image of a man rose before her eyes. She scarcely knew him, and he was as far removed from her as the stars above the earth. Yet she realized that he was her ideal, the man she could have loved if she had been more fortunately placed in the world; and that, compared to him, no man that she had ever met, or was likely to meet, would seem in her eyes worth the loving.

The thought of him, coming to her in such a way, almost frightened the girl, for she had not been aware what a hold he had obtained upon her imagination. She tried to shame herself by thinking, "How surprised he would be if he could dream that the poor little typewriter had such ideas about him in her foolish head"; and it was this reflection that brought the blush, which James Grant was quick to see.

"She is thinking of some one, after all," he told himself. "Who can it be? Oxford, perhaps? Yes, that's the most likely thing. That's why she blushes, for she needn't blush if it were any one who is likely to care honestly, and not just flirt with her to pass the time. That's one more to black mark against him. If I had any hesitation before, I've none left now."

"At least, you don't dislike me," he said.

"Of course not," the girl protested.

DAYS OF DIZZINESS.

Come to Many Durham People.

There are days of dizziness, spells of drowsiness, headache, sideache, backache.

Sometimes rheumatic pains after urinary trouble.

You are plainly told that the Kidneys are sick.

Booth's Kidney Pills cure all Kidney ills.

Mrs. H. McDonald, of Main St., Durham, Ont., says: "Headaches and spells of dizziness were frequent and often would render me unable to attend to my household duties. My back was weak and a dull heavy pain had settled across the small of it, in the region of the kidneys. I would be unable to stoop over or straighten myself up and would suffer with a languid tired feeling. Although I had used a number of different remedies I could find no relief and learning of Booth's Kidney Pills I concluded I would give them a trial. I had used only one box when the languidness had gone. My back strengthened and the pain left it. Headaches or dizziness have not bothered me since and I can conscientiously recommend Booth's Kidney Pills."

The Dangerous Feather Bed.

Few people seem to know the reason why medical science condemns the use of feather beds.

It is because feather beds are highly hygroscopic—a rather formidable word, but one meaning simply that feathers readily absorb and condense moisture. The body is constantly throwing off waste matter through the skin and the lungs. The feathers in the bed will absorb this waste matter as readily as it will simply atmospheric moisture. The feathers retain the waste matter during the day when the bed is cold—even when it is aired, unless also warmed by sunshine during the time it is exposed to the air.

At night, when the body of the sleeper warms the bed, the feathers renew their hygroscopic action, and throw off the waste matter absorbed the night before. The absorbent body of the sleeper is soon surrounded by a dense and highly poisonous atmosphere, the accumulative effect of which cannot help but be very injurious.

The skin, like the lungs, is continually breathing, and is very sensitive to external influences. Hence arises the need for air baths as well as for water baths. The entire body should be exposed to fresh air every day for as long a time as you can make possible, and all beds should be very thoroughly ventilated.
