"I have taken Scott's Emulsion for six weeks and have found it a wonderful remedy. Before I took the Emulsion I had no appetite; was weak; and lost nearly fifty pounds of flesh, and now I eat well and am gaining every day. I find Scott's Emulsion to be very easily digested and a good food for all weak people."—FLORENCE BLEEKER, No. 1 Myrtle Avenue, Bridgeton, N. J.

This is only one of thousands of cases where has given an appetite. It's so easily digested that it doesn't tax the digestive organs and they rest; yet the body is wonderfully nourished and built up. The digestion is improved—then ordinary food is sufficient.

Growing boys and girls, who need so much food to keep them well and strong, and also growing, should be given a bottle of Scott's Emulsion every few weeks. It prevents their getting run down and spindly. Nothing does them so much good.

How to Secure Farm Help

As usual the Salvation Army will be in a position to introduce farm help to farmers throughout the country during the coming spring. All indications point to a revival in trade and there is a probability that farm help will be scarce. The Army authorities are constantly in communication with new comers and others in the country who are desirous of locating on farms from time to time, and will be glad to introduce these people to farmers needing help.

It is not the purpose of the Army, however, to encourage the immigration of farm help to Canada during the coming season unless the conditions warrant such a policy. Therefore, farmers who are likely to require help, are advised to communicate promptly with Lieut.-Colonel Thomas Howell, James and Albert Streets, Toronto, Ontario. Application forms and all other information will be supplied freely on application to the above address.

As Clear as Mul.

The superintendent of a Sunday School class in Philadelphia recently called upon a visitor to say a few words to the class, the members of which are mostly children of tender age.

The visitor, a speaker well known for his verbose and circumlocutory mode of speech began his address as follows,—

"This morning, children, I purpose to offer you an epitome of the life of St. Paul. It may be, perhaps, that there are among you some too young to grasp the meaning of the word 'epitome.' 'Epitome,' children, is in its signification synonymous with synopsis.

CANADA IN BRIEF

The Montreal Witness denies having sold out to W. R. Hurst of the American, New York.

John McAdam of Toronto, jumped into the bay in an attempt to commit suicide but was rescued.

Wm. Bard convicted of stealing hides at Cornwall was allowed by a policeman to enter a butcher shop on his way to jail when he immediately seized a cleaver and cut off four of his fingers, remarking as he did so that they would steal no more.

Over six inches of snow fell in Montreal on Friday last between nine in the morning and six in the evening. It is estimated that the cost of removing it to the city will be $3000, and that it will cost the street railway $5000 to clear its tracks.

By lowering a semaphore and bringing a freight train to a standstill at Niagara Falls, robbers entered a car and got away with about $500 worth of plunder including six dozen quart bottles of the best champagne and a number of turkeys. Four men were arrested on suspicion.

AROUND THE FARM

Is the Stable Ventilated?

Winter is now upon us, and the cows instead of having the abundant ventilation and sunlight which the open fields give, will be confined to barn more or less during their milking period. The cow needs fresh air quite as much in winter as in summer and cannot properly perform functions, whether it be producing milk or meat, without this abundant supply. Therefore we raise the question,—"Have you provided for ventilation in your cow barn?"

If, when you open the barn door on a cold morning, the steam pours out you may know that your stall is not properly ventilated. How was it with you last winter? If it was not properly ventilated, then your cows have not been comfortable. If the steam, which is the breath of the cows and the perspiration, has made the atmosphere so damp that it becomes a good conductor, your cows have not been as comfortable in a well-made open shed to the south. You do not feel so comfortable on a foggy day as on one clear and cool. Do you want your cows to continue in that condition this winter and thus make an inefficient use of grain and clover hay that you are feeding them? Moreover, your cows will be breathing vitiated air heavily laden with carbonic acid gas, which is injurious to them, as well as deficient in the oxygen which is absolutely essential to her making proper use of the food.

There is no reason why any cow barn can not be properly ventilated, no matter how tightly built it may be. All that is necessary is to provide an intake near the floor on the outside, carry it up and let the air into the stable near the ceiling and to provide an outlet in the shape of a box of planed and grooved material reaching from six inches of the floor to the roof. One box is sufficient for ten, fifteen or twenty cows, depending upon its location and size. This outlet, of course, must go up to the roof and must be so constructed that it can be regulated according to the temperature and the direction of the wind. This is what is known as the King system and is regarded as the best system as yet developed. It has the advantage that it can be constructed by any carpenter or by the farmer himself if he is at all handy with tools.

Well Lighted Stables

Equally important with ventilation is lighting. We are having a great deal of complaint of tuberculosis among cows in dairy sections. If farmers really knew the extent to which this disease prevails, and must necessarily prevail when hogs are allowed access to the droppings of dairy and other cattle, there would be an earnest inquiry everywhere for a remedy.

We do not propose to give the remedy here, but simply point out that tuberculosis herds are almost universally found in barns that are deficient in ventilation and in sunlight; for sunlight is the great cheap disinfectant. There is plenty of sunlight even in winter and all that is necessary is to let it through every part of the barn. This can be done at small expense by any farmer, and would be done if he realized the value of sunlight as a disinfectant. Every farmer knows that young pigs, lambs or any other young things, never thrive in a dark pen. They must have sunlight; and while the cows do not need sunlight as much as calves or young things generally, nevertheless it is essential to good health.

Poultry Diseases.

Diseases of the internal organs are the result of over-feeding. The cause is thus easily removed and unless the trouble has been of long and continuous standing birds may be soon brought into good working condition again.

General ill health, an appearance of unthriftiness without any very pronounced symptoms, may generally be led to the charge of parasites, either, internal or external—the last may, of course, be easily removed; the former are usually a more serious character and require medicine to eradicate.

Ailments affecting the mouth, throat and lungs, the symptoms of which are discharges, growths and trouble in respiration, are nearly always caused by draughty, damp and dirty surroundings. To cure it is necessary first to remove the cause and afterwards give what ever drug or drugs may be suitable for the special complaint.

Sunstroke, apoplexy and diseases of the brain are due to great heat or sudden exertion when in a condition of over-fatness. The provision of shade, guarding against over-feeding and giving a sufficient supply of green food, which has an effect of cooling the blood will usually keep at bay any of these troubles.

Poultry doctoring is also a thankless and unprofitable task. Heroic measures at the outset are best. It is more profitable in the long run to stamp out diseases with the axe, fire and strong disinfectant, than attempt to cure it from the medicine chest. There is one thing that should certainly be done at once and that is isolate any birds which may show any symptoms of disease; never mind whether it appears to be a contagious disease or not. In any case isolate.
