EDITORIALS TO THE GREEN GROVE EYE-OPENER

WANTED TO BE AN EDITOR.

A verdant looking youth, upon applying for another editorial position the other day, was asked if he had had any experience in the business. "Haven't I though," he replied, as he put one foot under his chair to hide the unskilful patching of a backwoods cobbler. "I should say I had some experience. Haven't I corresponded with the Pumpkinville Screamer for six weeks? Haint that experience enough?" "What will do very well," replied the editor. "But when we take young men on our editorial staff, we generally put them through an examination. How much are twelve times one?" "Twelve, why any little boy ought to answer—" "Hold on, please, don't be too fast. Who discovered America?" "Klumbus, pshaw, them questions is just as easy as—" "Who was the first man?" "Adam. Why, Mister, I know all—" "What was his other name?" "His other name? Why, he didn't have none—" "Yes, he did, you see that's where we've got you. His other name was Ebenezer Adam, Esq. late of Paradise. Nobody knows this but editors, and see to it that you don't tell anybody." The youth said he wouldn't. The editor then asked him how many bones there were in the human hand. "Well," replied the lad, "I forget now, but I did know once." "What! Don't you know that? Why there are 7,482,654,921,444 in an ordinary man. A man that snores has one more bone than other people." "What bone is that?" asked the youth. "The trombone, it's situated somewhere in the nose. You won't forget that, will you?" He said he wouldn't. "How long would it take a mud turtle to cross the desert of Sahara with a small orphan boy to touch him up with a red hot poker?" "Well, look here, Mister, if I had a slate and pencil, I could figure that out. But, dear me, I'm not much on mental arithmetic." "Slate and pencil? You ever see a slate and pencil about a sanctum?" "Pretty tolerable." "How long could you live on raw corn and faith, and do the work of a domesticated animal?" "I don't believe I could live a week." "Well, replied the editor, "that's about as long as you'd want to live if you get an editorial position on this paper. You appear to be pretty well posted, I shall ask you one more question, and if you prove equal to it you can take off your coat and sail in." "Let's have it, squire!" "I didn't correspond with the Pumpkinville Screamer for nothing, let'er come, I'm on deck, I am." "Well," said the editor, "if two diametrical circles with octagonal peripheries should collide with a centrifugal idiosyncrasy; or, to put it plainer, we will say a disenfranchised nomenclature, what effect would the catastrophe exert on a crystallized codfish suspended by the tail from the homogenous rafter of the Empyrean?" As the full force of this ponderous problem broke upon the bewildered brain of the youth, he slowly dragged his inartistically cobbled shoe from under his chair and started from the room. The editor heard him descend the stair, go out and close the door. He then placidly resumed his duties, regretting that so promising a youth should have been weighed in the balance and found wanting.

Nearly Every One in Albion, Mich., Praises Mi-o-na, the Money Back Cure for Indigestion

Albion, Mich.—The people in Albion are elated to an unusual extent because of the many and remarkable cures which have lately been made by Mi-o-na, a dyspepsia cure with a world wide reputation. Everybody is endorsing Mi-o-na. Here is what some respected residents say:
Mrs. E.C. Cass says: "Mi-o-na cured me of a stomach trouble that had bothered me a long time."
W.H. Mott says: "I had doctor-ed for months without help. I used Mi-o-na and since using it three years ago, I have been free from the distress."
Mrs. Emma Overy says: "For months I had dyspepsia, bad stomach distress, pains and nausea. Nothing I used relieved or cured till I used Mi-o-na."
Macfarlane & Co, the druggists, in Durham, sell the wonderful dyspepsia cure, Mi-o-na for 50 cents a large box. And they think so well of it that they will give your money back if it doesn't cure.

Summed Up.

He was a lion tamer, but the man who ruled the king of the forest was in turn ruled by his wife. One night he was entertained by his friends, who refused to allow him to depart until the small hours of the morning. As a result of a resentment that his better half would not receive him as cordially as he deserved, consequently he spent the night elsewhere.
In the morning he tried to slip into the house unobserved; but, alas, a voice from the top of the stairs greeted him coldly:
"Where have you been all night, John?"
"Well, my dear, I was afraid of disturbing you, so I slept in the lions' cage."
There was a moment's pause, a gritting of teeth, then down the stairs floated one word:
"Coward!"

Playing the Part.

An official of the British Government said recently of a fishing excursion:

"I once made a fishing excursion to a stream that flowed behind a lunatic asylum. As I sat and smoked on the bank, watching my cork, I noticed a strange object floating down toward me with the current. I saw that it was a man. He had all his clothes on, and he was swimming in the strangest way. I really believe every part of him was submerged but one nostril.
"Hi!" I shouted. "What are you doing there?"
He lifted his head from beneath the surface, and then, before drawing it underneath again, he snapped: "Sh-h! Don't interfere! I'm a submarine!"

Rapid Transit.

In these days of rapid transit a paragraph from a Yorkshire paper of 1760 is interesting. It is an account of a London merchant's journey from London to Dublin and back.

Leaving London on Monday evening, the traveler reached Liverpool on Wednesday morning, in time to catch the packet for Dublin, which city he reached on Thursday. During that day he transacted his business in the capital, and next morning sailed for Liverpool, arriving there on Saturday Monday, say him back in London and his journey was complete, having taken only eight days! "And," concludes the writer, "there is every reason to believe that it will be possible to beat even this performance in the near future."—Westminster Gazette.

Glazed Eyes.

Snakes may almost be said to have glass eyes, inasmuch as their eyes never close. They are without lids and each is covered with a transparent scale much resembling glass. When the reptile casts its outer skin the eye scales come off with the rest of the transparent envelope out of which the snake slips.
This glassy eye scale is so tough that it effectually protects the true eye from the twigs, sharp grass and other obstructions which the snake encounters in its travels, yet it is transparent enough to allow the most perfect vision. Thus if the snake has not a glass eye it may, at any rate be said to wear eyeglasses.

Answered Well.

"What, sir," asked the large man with the bulging biceps and the ponderous fist as he glared at the slim gentleman who had accidentally stumbled over his toes, "would you say I were to tell you that you were an awkward ass and an annoying chump?"
"I should at once say," replied the other man, who had enjoyed the advantage of a course in the diplomat service, "that you had the courage of your convictions."

Grace.

A paper in northwestern Kansas tells of a pious old farmer who had the habit of gazing at rafters in his dining-room when saying grace. One day while so engaged he forgot himself, and his grace sounded something like this: "We thank thee for this food and— By Joe, there's that derned gimlet I've been looking for the last six months! I'll have Jim up there and get it. Thou hast been gracious to us, O Lord, and again thank thee. Amen!"
