HER FIRST DAY AS A TEACHER.

We do not wish to give the impression that the following is a typical experience of a rural school teacher. It is, however, the experience of a real teacher in a remote section of the counties of Ontario, in the heart of what was once one of our fine lumber districts. The heavy timber had all been cut, leaving a scattering of less valuable wood, which was being cut and sold as fuel. The land, stripped of its only wealth, the forest was rocky and almost valueless for cultivation. A few families, however, were scattered over a length of several miles, engaged either in the lumber business, or eking out a scanty living from the rocky soil.

WANTED.—A qualified teacher, lady preferred, for a rural school, convenient to post office and railway. Average attendance, twenty. Answering this advertisement she was overjoyed to receive a message to meet the secretary-treasurer at a neighboring town to make a personal application. She was accepted, and returned home, already experiencing feelings, which were not the happiest. She felt the dawning of future homesickness and great fear of her ability to fill the position of principal of South Lake school.

New Year's Day came, and with it her brief journey to the scene of her new life. The "convenient" railway station proved to be ten miles away, but the day was beautiful, the sleighing perfect, and she enjoyed every minute of that ten-mile drive behind a team of spirited horses.

Disappointment awaited her, however. She had been told that she was to board with a certain Mrs. Robbs, who was a widow. She had already formed a picture of Mrs. Robbs as a dear, little old grandmother, living in a rambling farm house, surrounded by fields and orchards. The reality, as it appeared to her after her long drive, was a log house, surrounded by acres of blackened stumps, the remains of the mighty forest monarchs, which had been cut in recent years, and the stumps blackened by fires, in an attempt to clear the land. The widow was tall, wearing a coarse cotton gown, which fairly came to her ankles displaying a pair of heavy boots. Her thin, gray hair, was unbecomingly arranged in a little tight knot on the top of her head.

Every hair was drawn to such a tension that her mouth was never quite closed over two prominent front teeth which she afterwards learned, always ached, and could only be relieved by frequent applications of salt. On showing her to her room, the widow said, "My man died in this room, in that very bed, but you need never feel afraid for a better meaning man never lived. No one knows how I miss him." The teacher was lost in amazement at the appearance of the bed, which looked so high and round, that she wondered how she could ever get on it, and once on how she should ever stay there. Noticing her wandering gaze, the widow said, "I had my boys fill the tick with new straw to-day, so it will be nice and soft. The last time it was filled was last summer, and when they brought it in we found a snake in it. Well, good-night, don't think of anyone's dream here." Strange to say, the teacher was so tired and sleepy that she was soon sound asleep, quite untroubled by visions of ghosts in the corners or snakes in the bed.

She awoke to find the sun shining brightly. After breakfast, a sleigh, with impatient horses, stood ready at the door to drive her to school. As they drove along, they gathered up those scholars whose homes were on that road. The teacher had not language to describe the variety of costume, the brilliant red and white hose, the wonderful woollen hoods of the girls, and the gay, knitted scarfs of the boys. As she prepared for rest that night, she heard in clear, boyish tones over her head, "Say, boys, do you know what Nigger Dan says about the new school ma'am? He says if they want to make her mouth any bigger they'll have to move her ears back." At the laugh which followed, her cup of misery overflowed and she cried herself to sleep.

RADIANT HAIR New York Society Women's Hair Matched Only by Parisians.

While much attention is given to choicest gowns by New York society women, the turbulent fad just now is the care of the hair. For many years the clever women of Paris have been famed for the magnificent beauty of their hair.

"Glorious hair," a Virginian calls it, "so radiant and luxuriant that it not only attracts but fascinates and compels unstinted admiration." But now that the elite of New York, ever anxious to improve their beauty, have learned that Parisian Sage, a remarkable and almost marvellous hair nourisher and beautifier, is almost entirely responsible for the charming hair of the ladies of France, the demand for it has become enormous.

Parisian Sage is now sold all over Canada and in Durham by Macfarlane & Co., who are glad to guarantee it to eradicate dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks, or money back. Large bottle 50 cents. Say Jack, I was walking down the street the other day and I saw a dog. Oh! you did? Oh! say, there is the 31st Regimental Band, and they are going to have a concert in the town hall in the near future, and they are bringing a cracker of a comic here. Is that so? Let's go and get tickets at Dr. de Van's Female Pills.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

The following address to Mrs. R. Pettigrew was made by the South Grey Women's Institute at the meeting held on Thursday of last week, at the home of Mrs. Neil McCannel. Mr. and Mrs. Pettigrew and family intend leaving for Biggar, Sask., in the course of a few weeks, and as Mrs. Pettigrew had been long an active member of the Institute, it was quite fitting that an expression of regard be made for her valuable assistance.

THE ADDRESS. Dear Mrs. Pettigrew, While the members of Durham branch of South Grey Women's Institute, part with you with deep feelings of regret, during the years you have been with us in this society, your kindness, good advice and example have been of great value to us.

While sorry to lose you, we wish you, your husband, and family, all success and abundant happiness in your new home, and may the hours we have spent together be a bright spot in your memory. In parting we ask you to accept this small gift as a remembrance of this society.

Signed on behalf of the Society, MRS. THOS. MCANULTY, MRS. D. McCRIE, President, MRS. THOS. BROWN, MRS. THOS. MCGIRR.

Mrs. Pettigrew made a suitable reply expressive of her kindly feeling for the association, and a desire that the good work be continued, and further, that if we should not meet here again we may meet in that upper and better world.

Vickers

Mr. Ted Vickers is engaged as clerk in McKechnies' store. Mr. Thos. Kennedy has purchased a horse from Mr. Frank Wise.
