said, with a mysterious significance. "I learned things. Four thousand dollars was found on the child when you took charge of her. You will pay $3,000 to Eunice within a week. If you make any difficulty about it I shall exact her back pay—$2 a week for the past five years and interest on the $3,000 for nineteen years. See here, Morningstar!"

He rose and with his hands in his pockets strolled over to the settee and towered over the shrinking figure of the little farmer. "I am not a man to waste words or enter into useless discussion. I mean just what I say. I am going to defend this young girl and see that she gets her rights. I learned some things in your haunted room last night which have given me the power. I think, to do so. Now, I give you just a week to make up your mind. If you can't come to the point by that time I'll help you—by means of a lawsuit. Do you understand?"

"You must be crazy," Morningstar chokingly exclaimed. "Pay that three girl $3,000! More'n our Ollie'll get till she gets married ready! Why, it would leave us poor yet!"

"You have no right to be rich on other people's money. The $3,000 belongs to Eunice. Now, don't make any fuss or I'll exact nineteen years' interest besides. You must pay the money. That's settled."

"Well, I won't! Go ahead with your lawsuit!" Morningstar retorted, his face apoplectic.

"I never thought, Doc, you'd turn on us like this here—or I'd cert'nly never took you to board!" lamented Mrs. Morningstar, her cheeks very white.

"I'm not 'turning' on you, Mrs. Morningstar. I'm helping you to clear your conscience and do the honest thing to that orphan girl. It is really not so much for the girl's sake—she may not need the money, though again she may—but for your immortal souls sake."

"What do you mean? She mayn't need it. Is it that you're sweet on her and want to marry her, or what? Why, I ain't never seen you so much as look at her!"

"What was it you seen and heard in that there room?" growled Morningstar, "that gives you such cheek to talk up to us?"

"Ghosts reveal secrets. I may tell you after you've paid over the $3,000."

"Well, I ain't payin' it! Put that in your pipe and smoke it, will you?"

"As you please. If there's a lawsuit you'll pay it with interest and back wages besides. Let me know by the time I come back which you prefer. I'm going away tomorrow morning and will return here in a week."

"Not here. Me and mom ain't board in' you another day."

"Then shall I put up at the village tavern when I come back?"

"I'll tell them young ladies you ain't no farmand."

"And lose the money I have promised you if you did not betray who I was?" he asked indifferently.

This always strong argument he saw was answer enough to the threat.

"Now, Mrs. Morningstar," he turned to her quietly, "will you be so good as to let me have the little necklace and locket found on the child containing her photograph and that of a lady?"

Mrs. Morningstar stared at him almost with horror. "Did you see the ghost, and did she tell you about that there chain and locket?" she faltered.

"I can't explain anything to you now. I may tell you when I come back. Meantime give me the necklace."

"Don't you give it to him," Morningstar ordered her. "He'll be usin' it for evidence or what?"

"It's worse thin," said Mrs. Morningstar. "I wore it on Ollie till she overgrew it ready."

"Let me have it, at any rate."

"All right. You have it down for me by this afternoon. Remember, Morningstar," he concluded, turning to leave the room, "I give you one week from today, not a day more."

He strolled out, and the man and woman were left alone to confront the horror of parting with $3,000 of their hoarded accumulation.

INJURIES & SKIN SORES—QUICK CURE.

A little child ran crying to her mother the other day with a nasty flesh wound and asked for Zam-Buk.

There lies a more powerful argument for Zam-Buk than even the scientists can bring. The child had had Zam-Buk before, and knew it eased pain and healed.

Zam-Buk works in two directions. Prevents worse results from a skin injury or skin disease (such as festering and blood poisoning) while it repairs the damage already done. Zam-Buk is entirely herbal, is pure, contains no trace of animal fat or mineral coloring. Surest and quickest known healer.

FATHER AND SON BENEFIT FROM USE OF THIS BALM.

Mr. Walter Adams, 77 Railway Ave., Stratford, says:—"My son, William, while playing barefooted about the backyard, cut his little toe on the sharp edge of a piece of tin. This toe was cut at the first joint, and almost severed from the foot. My wife hurriedly bathed it with warm water, afterwards applying some lint thickly spread with Zam-Buk. The healing balm quickly checked the flow of blood, eased and soothed the pain, and prevented inflammation and more serious results. In a few weeks Zam-Buk healed the wound so nicely that my son was able once more to go about, and also to wear his shoes without the slightest inconvenience. Not only is Zam-Buk valuable for wounds and cuts, but, used as an embrocation, I have also found it effective for rheumatic pains."

Zam-Buk cures cuts, burns, eczema, ringworm, diphtheria, cold cracks, and all skin diseases. Druggists everywhere, 50c box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Tor. no., for price.

Hampden.

Misses Rebecca and Bessie Park spent Saturday afternoon, the guests of the Misses Byers.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. McLean visited with Mrs. Jas. Watt, of Aytou, recently.

Miss Minnie Mearns visited Friday afternoon with Mrs. M.W. Byers.

Miss M. Halpenny visited last week with Mr. and Mrs. David Robison, of the 16th.

Mr. Jas. Byers sold a valuable draught horse to Mr. David Willis last week, and Mr. Henry Ford purchased one from Mr. J. Whyte.

Mrs. Jas. Watt held a very successful sale of household goods last Saturday, and is visiting for a week at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Geo. Willis, before leaving for the West.

Mr. Alex. McLean made a business trip to Walkerton last Saturday, returning the same forenoon. It would tax the driving abilities of a modern Ben Hur to keep Alex. in sight when he hits the trail.

Some of the agriculturalists in this locality are becoming scarce of feed for stock, and unless an early spring is at hand, there will be no wee drappie in the bottle for the mavin'.

Mrs. Robt. Muir's sale of farm stock and implements on Saturday last was well attended by Hampdenites. The stock sold at a high figure, while the machinery, as is the general rule, sold at less than value. It is Mrs. Muir's intention to reside in Hanover when a purchaser for the farm is secured.

Classic City Chronicles.

Your delinquent scribe is pleased to see the pleasant and intelligent faces of the Chronicle correspondents grace the pages of this periodical, and he doesn't feel that his "phiz," deserves a place among the faithful. However, we got "took" all the same, and in due time the precious package will reach the Chronicle office.

We have had a remarkably fine winter in this district. Through January and February the weather was of that bright, sharp, frosty character which Canadians relish. During the last two weeks, warm days and cold nights have obtained and as a result, the snow is going away quite gradually. How ever, the rapid thaw last Saturday and Sunday, 5th and 6th, threatens to make matters interesting, as many of the cellars began to look like miniature swimming tanks, but on Monday Jack Frost kindly intervened, and a serious flood was averted.

About ninety of the Normal school students are writing on their final examinations at present. There is some hard thinking done in the Institution in Queen's Park these days. We trust all the candidates will be successful, as they have had a pretty hard term's work. Those who fail will have to return after Easter and write again in June. It is no easy task to become a teacher nowadays, and for that matter it is not easy to become anything "that's worth while. Leaving out farming I think teaching is about as good a job as most of things people work at. "I'll never do for a teacher" is an expression that a pedagogical open hears, and it is generally spoken in a commiserating tone of voice, as if the poor mortal who is instructing the young idea how to shoot is engaged in one of the sorriest, most trying, most ill-paid and most discouraging occupation under the sun. To tell the truth, we (I say "we" for an obnoxious reason) do not need anybody's pity. Teaching is a pretty good calling. It is better than making shirt waists for 55c a day in some dreary, city workshop, or humping one's back over a book-keeper's desk at $6 a week or measuring cloth or weighing sugar at $9 a week, with three hours thrown in on Saturday night as a sort of a bonus to the merchant. Teachers work about 200 days in the year, with an average of seven hours a day. If they are ill, their salaries are paid for four weeks, the same as if they had actually taught during that period. Teaching is eminently a healthy vocation, providing, of course, the teacher exercises common sense in all matters generally. The teacher's environments are generally congenial and cheerful, and if they are not, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, it is the teacher's fault. Teacher's salaries, are, to say the least, very satisfactory, and are paid with clockwork regularity. Now, dear readers, do not pity the teachers. They need your sympathy and co-operation, but, honestly, they do not need pity; no more than they need charity.

We had a visit from the Rev. Sam Small recently, and it was refreshing to hear him talk, as his subjects are not of the ordinary type. He addressed about 800 men in the opera house on a Sunday afternoon. His subject was "Prohibition," and was treated in such a unique, logical and convincing manner, that barely one per cent. of that great audience left the building believing that the liquor traffic is necessary to the success of any municipality outside of hell. Here is an example of his expressive logic: "How much does the city get in revenue from the liquor licenses?" was one of his questions. About $4000 was the answer "What is your population?" "About fifteen or sixteen thousand." "Why," was his quick retort, "that is not more than 25c a head. It is not enough to make you look like 30c." The roar of laughter that followed when the applicable repertoire became apparent could be heard far away. But Mr. Small wasn't done with them. He continued with withering sarcasm and irony, "You sell a long-snouted razor backed, cork-screw-tailed hog weighing 150 lbs. for $12, but you fellows weighing that much will walk down to the ballot box and sell yourselves for 25c. You ought to be ashamed of yourselves." Another incident he related is worth recording. A short time before he came to the Classic City, he slept in a room next to one occupied by a drunken man who got very sick through the night, and was attacked by a very severe vomiting spell. "Do you know," said the speaker, "when I heard that fellow vomiting and groaning, I thought that if the hotel keeper had given him beef, potatoes, etc., that would cause such an indescribable sickness, the victim would have had the man imprisoned for attempting to poison him, but, of course, nothing was done when whiskey caused the trouble." He also gave a lecture on "His Majesty, the Devil," that was certainly original and informing. As a sort of text, he took a passage of scripture, which read: "The Devil as a roaring lion walketh about seeking whom he can devour." and like the old Scotch preacher, divided the quotation as follows: 1.—Who the devil she is; 2.—Where the devil she is going; 3.—What the devil she is roaring about.
