

Loose Tea Loses Flavour

It not only loses flavour, but worse than this, loose tea takes on new odors, such as coal oil, molasses, onions, coffee, soap, etc.,—to say nothing of its exposure to the sun, dust, dirt and air. Therefore for your protection

Edge Hill.

Mr. George Allan is engaged with Mr. W.G. Firth for a month.

Mrs. James Staples of Markdale, is visiting her son, Fred, and with other relatives.

Miss Lena Edge and her aunt, Mrs. A. Edge, were guests at McWilliams for several days.

Miss Valerie Edge was a guest at the wedding of a friend in Walkerton on Wednesday.

Miss Emma Harper of Mount Forest, was visiting for several days with the Edge families in this neighborhood.

Miss Annis I. Edge, who is teaching in Warton high school, is spending her Easter holidays at her home here.

Mr. E.J. Reynolds, who taught school here during the forepart of 1910, is spending part of his Easter vacation in the neighborhood.

Several of our farmers are engaged in the manufacture of maple syrup. The sap run, however, is not up to the average of former years.

Amongst the students who were home for the holidays, we notice, Miss Maggie Firth from Goderich Collegiate Institute; Miss Mary Edge from Owen Sound Collegiate Institute, and Mr. Thos. Firth from Faculty of Education, Toronto

On Wednesday evening the debate between Edge Hill and No. 9 Literary Societies was held in the school here. The attendance was not as large as might have been owing to the very unsatisfactory state of the roads, still the school was comfortably filled. Mr. W.G. Firth made an excellent chairman and the program, consisting of several choruses by the Glee Club, a duet by Misses Sarah Edge and Kate McFayden, a recitation by Clara Greenwood, a solo by Sarah Edge and a Gaelic song by J. S. McDonald was much appreciated. The debate, however, occupied most of the time. The subject was "Resolved that Washington was a greater general and statesman than Wellington." The No. 9 speakers had the choice of men and had selected Wellington, and the negative side of the debate. The speakers from No. 9 were Mr. Robert McFadden, Alex. Aljoe and Thomas Allan, while Edge Hill was represented by John L. McDonald, John G. Firth and W. J. Ritchie. The two societies had jointly selected for judge Mr. P. Ramage, in whose clear judgment and straight forwardness they both have the utmost confidence. Associated with him were Fred Irish, selected by No. 9, and J.W. Greenwood, chosen by Edge Hill. After the various speakers had delivered themselves of their ideas and the flow of eloquence had subsided, the three judges set about the difficult task of coming to a decision. After carefully summing up the points, Mr. Ramage announced that the decision was in favor of the negative by just half a point. That's all and none of the Edge Hill speakers sat with the judges either. However, it was a good debate and we feel that those who heard it have a better knowledge of those two great men. The judges were tendered a hearty thanks and the meeting was closed with the National Anthem.

Waudby.

On Thursday, March 3rd, a number of the neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Sparling gathered at their home to bid farewell to them and their family ere their departure for the West. Mr. Wm. Baker was called to the chair when a very nice program was rendered, after which the ladies passed around the eatables which they prepared for the occasion, and everybody enjoyed themselves. It was the united wish of everyone that Mr. and Mrs. Sparling and Cecil would have an abundance of success in their new home. The address and presentation.

Mr. Sparling and family.—Dear Friends,—We, your friends and neighbors, hearing that you are soon to depart from our midst, have met here this evening to express our appreciation of the many benefits derived from your sojourn with us during the past years. As a neighbor you have been all that could be desired. Your ready willingness to help and oblige has won for you the esteem and good will of those whom you come in contact with. Your removal from the neighborhood will be sincerely regretted and on this occasion the old adage is very true,—"What is our loss will be another's gain." As a member of the church you have always been earnest and zealous, taking an active part in church and Sunday school. We feel sure that your example and moral influence will bear fruit in the years to come. In the new and growing West where your home for the future will be, there will be ample opportunity for work of this nature, and we believe that you and your family will prove a help and blessing to the community in which you live. As a slight symbol of the esteem in which you and your family are held, we ask you to accept of this purse. We wish to recognize in some material way the many services you have rendered us, and now as you go to your new home the kindly regard and best wishes of your many friends will follow you, and that every success may attend you is the wish of us all.

Signed.—WM. J. BAKER JOHN ELLISON, JR. JAMES ELLISON

He Was Out Late.

The Cookstown Advocate gives the following account of a shooting affair in one of their banks, which might have resulted seriously: "On account of the floods Sunday night last one of the clerks of the Union Bank was rather late in reaching his sleeping quarters at the bank here, the result being a narrow escape from death. This is how it happened: About ten o'clock the junior clerk retired, and, thinking the other clerks had done the same, locked up for the night and went to bed. When in the middle of a happy dream the junior was rudely awakened by the sound of foot steps and the clinking of door knobs, keys, etc. Thinking that burglars were on the job he reached for his revolver. Mr. "burglar" was then heard outside the junior's bedroom window, and when no reply was given to his question "who's there," the clerk gave the "intruder" a last word of warning and forthwith blazed three shots at him through the window. Hearing him hustling around the bank at a 2.40 clip, the young man sent two more balls of lead after the "burglar." Just as things were beginning to look serious the proceedings were called to a halt by the late Mr. — giving the countersign at the front door, then all was well—but it was a narrow escape."

Annan Girl Made Sober.

On the day that the Legislature was prorogued, its harmony was disturbed by a suffragette, who from her place in the gallery, demanded votes for women, and then escaped before the Sergeant at Arms could capture her. Later her identity was discovered, and it turns out that she is Miss Olivia Smith, and is almost a native of Annan, where she spent most of her early life. She came there, it is said, from England, when a child of five years old, and was adopted by James Turnbull. The next fifteen years of her life were spent there; she attended the public school and the Presbyterian Sunday school. During that time she showed no signs of suffragette leanings. At twenty years of age, about the year 1900, she went back to England and entered a London hospital to train as a nurse. Since her graduation she has visited in Annan more than once. Miss Smith is an enthusiastic suffragette, and has taken a prominent part in the movement in England. About two years ago, she spent a term in gaol on that account. She is described as a modest, refined woman, not at all of the sort one imagines the militant suffragette to be. But she is nevertheless a strong advocate of woman suffrage, and has the courage of her convictions. She has spent, altogether, three terms in prison through devotion to her cause.—Owen Sound Sun.

The Work Horse.

A sorrel colt one pleasant day ran round and round a stack of hay, and kicked it's heels and pawed the land, and reared and jumped to beat the band. The older horses stood around and swallowed fodder by the pound and gave no notice to the kid that gayly round the hay stack slid. I loafed around and murmured then,—If horses were as mean as men, some old gray work-horse, stiff and sour, would jaw that colt for half an hour; me thinks I hear that work horse say,—"You think you are fresh and sporty now, but when they hitch you to the plow and strap a harness on your back and work you till your innards crack, and kick you when you want to balk, and slug you with a chunk of rock, and cover you with nasty sores, and leave you freezing out of doors,—O, then you won't kick up your heels, you'll know then how a work-horse feels!" But horses have no croaking voice to chill the colt that would rejoice; no gray-beard plug would leave its feed to make the heart of boyhood bleed, no dismal prophecies are heard, no moral homilies abound, where horses stand and eat their hay, and so the colts may run and play.—Wait Mason in The Star.

Come and see the "Halley Comet" hat bow, also the "Chantecleier" hat bow. One of these hat bows almost complete the trimming on one hat. They are well worth seeing.—Miss Dick.

High Cost of Living.

While walking gayly down the street last time I was in town, I read a welcome news despatch that prices had gone down, "Aha," said I, "I now perchance may start at once to eat That nourishing, luxurious commodity called meat." I hastened to a butcher shop. "Give me a steak," said I, "I understand the price of it is not so very high." "Too cheap, alas," the butcher said "the price I hate to state; Its ninety-seven cents a pound, marked down from ninety-eight." "Ah well," I sighed, "the price of meat is still prohibitive; I'll go and get a good cheap fish, for everyone must live," And so I hustled up a mort where fishes were for sale, Both large and small and lean and fat, from whitebait into whale, Said I, "I hear these denizens of yonder variety deep, To-day don't set one back so much in other words they're cheap!" "They are" the fishman answered me, "fresh fish right off the line, That once were sixty cents an oz, are only fifty-nine."

"Well never mind," I gayly said.

"I'll tell you what I'll do, I'll drop in on a grocery store and buy an egg or two, For after all, what's brighter and more tempting than the eye That looks expectant at you from a red hot poach or fry? If eggs are cheaper than they were I told the grocer man, "I'll take a pair and pay for them on the installment plan," "Of course they're cheaper," he replied, "Our choicest eggs, my son. Are sixty cents a bite to-day, marked down from sixty-one." —Auto-Ship in Burk Falls Arrow.
