The above is a cut of the front elevation of the new Artemesia Continuation School, to be erected in Flesherton. The building will be 54 by 78 feet, with six rooms, library, cloak rooms, basement, etc. The contract was awarded last week to Mr. Stevia, of Chesley, and building operations will commence shortly. The building is to be erected on a park lot formerly owned and improved by the owner of this paper, and the row of beautiful shade trees planted there about twenty years ago by Ye Editor himself personally will form pleasant resting places for the children of future generations. For this act alone, we should be honored by a monument in front of the school building. All jokes aside, they were fine, healthy looking trees when we last saw them, and of the whole row of eleven or twelve, not one died, or had to be replaced. The cut appears through the courtesy of the Advance.

Even people who are usually healthy occasionally require some kind of a food tonic.
