WINDOW GAZING.

A Fascinating Occupation For the Tourist in Paris.
Window gazing is one of the recognized vocations of the tourist in Paris. Everybody engages in this fascinating occupation, and, in truth, it would be impossible to resist the temptation, for the most beautiful wares are set forth in the most artistic manner, and the only way you can withstand the desire for possession is to leave the coin of the realm and even your letter of credit at home; otherwise there is no telling into what extravagance, not to say useless purchase, you may be persuaded when probably you have just gone out for a morning stroll.
Of all these windows the jewelers' seem to be the greatest magnets. But the bewildering part of it is that to the man or woman unversed in the knowledge of precious stones the imitations thereof look quite as good as the genuine articles. Pearls, diamonds, rubies, emeralds and so throughout the long list stones are so perfectly imitated that it is small wonder many American women succumb to the temptation of buying them. But there the temptation does not end, for they bring them home with all the intent to dazzle, bewilder and deceive their unsuspecting relatives and friends with the magnificence of their suddenly acquired wealth of jewels. Women whom one would never suspect of wearing imitation gems frequent the shops where they are for sale in Paris in the most open, not to say brazen, manner, while the foreign papers fairly bristle with advertisements of re-constructed and imitation gems, which only goes to show what a lucrative business it must be.—New York Tribune.

AN OLD BUSYBODY.

What the Bridegroom Thought of the Old Native at the Station.
While waiting for the train the bride and bridegroom walked slowly up and down the platform.
"I don't know what this joking and guying may have been to you," he remarked, "but it's death to me. I never experienced such an ordeal."
"It's perfectly dreadful," she answered. "I shall be so glad when we get away from everybody we know."
"They're actually impertinent," he went on. "Why, the very natives!"
At this unpropitious moment the wheezy old station master walked up to them.
"Be you goin' to take this train?" he asked.
"It's none of your business," retorted the bridegroom indignantly as he guided the bride up the platform, where they conduced with each other over the impertinence of some of the natives.
Onward came the train, its vapor curling from afar. It was the last to their destination that day—an express. Nearer and nearer it came at full speed; then in a moment it whizzed past and was gone.
"Why in thunder didn't that train stop?" yelled the bridegroom.
"Cos you sed 'twarn't none of my business. I has to signal if that train's to stop."
And as the old station master softly stroked his board there was a wicked twinkle in his eye.—London Tit-Bits.

The dog poisoning fiend been getting in his work. The past month or so a result, a half dozen dogs have been sent to their happy grounds by his nefarious hand. This is about the meanest individual a town can possess. We almost hope he may be a victim to his own dog, who will poison a dog, if it be a bad one, is a poor at best, and will learn, in despatch human beings, same route. You can't win a man who would come into a house by night with a intent, but the human eye goes about setting out to catch somebody's dog if impossible to catch.
