SHOOTING A BUTTERFLY
The largest butterfly known is found only in British Guiana, and specimens are worth anything from $100 upward. The male measures eight inches across the wings and the female not less than eleven inches, a wing spread exceeding that of many small birds.
The story of the first discovery of this gigantic butterfly is a curious one, says the Wide World. A naturalist saw a specimen perched on the top of a tree, and failing to capture it by any other means, finally shot it.
From the fragments he decided that the species was entirely unknown to science, and he forthwith fitted out an expedition at a cost of many thousands of dollars to go in search of the insects.
Two members of the party fell victims to the Papuan cannibals, and another was rescued only in the nick of time. In spite of this inauspicious commencement to his enterprise, however, the naturalist persevered and ultimately succeeded in obtaining perfect specimens.

The beneficial effect of iron upon the system weakened through illness, overwork or anemia, is well known. Ferronin is a preparation which supplies the valuable element in the most efficient way, combining with it the nourishing qualities of beef and the mildly stimulative effect of sherry wine. Ferronin costs $1.00 a bottle at druggists.

FAMILY OF NEW KING

SOMETHING ABOUT THE PRINCESS AND YOUNG PRINCES.

George V. Stands Out Pre-eminently as a Family Man, and His Chief Delight is in His Home—The Children Are Carefully Educated and Except For the Extra Work They Have to Do Lead Ordinary Life.

In no phase of his life, neither on the beloved sea nor at one of the many forms of sport which he follows, is King George V. quite so happy as in his own family circle. He is pre-eminently a home lover and his pride is in his Queen and his flock of five boys and a girl.
And good reason has he to be proud of his children. Prince David, heir apparent to the throne of Great Britain is one of the most promising princes in England's history.

The six children of Their Majesties are all noted for their blue eyes, clear complexions and hair of a golden hue. They have been accustomed to roaming the fields round Sandringham, often in the company of their father. The eldest, Prince Edward Albert, is now in his sixteenth year, and he and Prince Albert Frederick, who comes next, are both naval cadets. Then comes Princess Mary of Wales, now in her thirteenth year, to become the Princess Royal of England. The youngest of the family is the little youngest, John Charles, who on the next 13th of July celebrates his fifth birthday.

Like Military Drill.
All the royal children are said to have a love of things military. Trumpets and swords and flags, drilling, marching and saluting constituted a great deal of their family games. Sometimes their father took a hand in their games, and with a paper cocked hat like the rest of the company, or with a juvenile drum, took his place at the head of the column.

The elder children he has put through their French and Latin and German regularly, and taught them to skate and swim and ride. A story is told of an amateur photographer who took a snapshot of two sturdy youngsters sporting in a swimming pool in the village, and was astonished on showing the print to the village innkeeper to learn that the two youngsters were Prince "Bertie" and Prince "David."

Their parents are quite opposed to the habits of the new rich in loading their children up with large sums as pocket money. For a long time their three eldest children were given an allowance of two shillings a week each as pocket-money, and of this sum they were required to give an exact account before any further installment was forthcoming. The Princess Mary opened a personal account in a post office savings bank, and used to take her turn in the line of waiting depositors as required by statute. It was opened in the name of "Mary of Wales." Prince "Bertie" at one time went into the retail candy business for the benefit of the other members of the family, until his father insisted that the profits must be devoted to some charitable purpose.

A Frank Reply.
Their frankness of manner may not unlike be an inheritance from their mother, of whose schooldays a story is told.
Her Royal Highness' pet subject, it appears, was geography, and on one occasion she was set a map of the world to do from memory—the outline only. On showing it to her governess when completed, the latter exclaimed: "Why, you have left out China. Don't you know where it is?"
"Yes," replied the future Queen of England, "very stubbornly but very loyally. I know quite well where it should be, but I am not going to put it in my map. The Queen is angry with China just now, so it has no right to have a place in the world at all."

A Bright and Manly Youth.
The new apparent, Prince Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David of Wales, Duke of Saxony and Prince of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, born at Windsor Lodge, Sheen, June 23, 1894. Prince Edward, who in the near future will assume the title of Prince of Wales, is an exceedingly bright and manly youth and was a great favorite of his grandfather, the late King. He is the eldest child of the new King, and his education was entirely looked after by King Edward. He and his brothers and sister were taught to read and write at four years old, and from the age of five had to speak in French and German.

Very special care, by the way, is taken in instructing all the royal children in English history. In order to their studies, the princes are taken frequently to the British Museum by Mr. Hansell, their teacher, to see original letters and documents of great historical importance, which they have found mentioned in their books. This method of instruction was one that greatly appealed to Prince Edward, for whom these documents had a tremendous fascination, the young prince would frequently plead to be taken to the British Museum instead of going to see a football or cricket match; sometimes his request was granted, and he would spend hours reading these dusty old documents which deal with affairs that have had so great an influence on the history of our Empire. The young heir-apparent is now serving as a naval cadet.

A Democratic King.

The new King has been exceptionally popular among his people as Prince of Wales and has been noted for his democratic ways. An incident in illustration of this was his acting as a stoker on board the Indomitable on the return of that warship from the Quebec tercentenary in 1908. Having been brought up a sailor, he was quite at home in the rough surroundings. He had known what it felt to be half smothered in coal dust. As a sailor who served on the Indomitable put it: "He's no ornamental sailor, but a seaman down to his boots." As the Indomitable's coal shoveler the prince wore a stoker's kit consisting of a white suit, white headgear and white gloves.

His character as a sailor may be indicated by a sentiment he wrote in the Duchess of Fife's album: "I am a sailor, and every sailor loves a lass. (Don't show this to the duchess.) Give me a good dinner, a good glass of grog, and then I dislike nothing and nobody in the world." The new King was the favorite grandchild of the late Queen Victoria and bears a striking resemblance to his aunt, the Empress Dowager of Russia.

Removed His Clothes.

King George has a strong sense of humor, which often breaks through the intense reserve of his character. One of the earliest authentic stories of the King concerns a visit to Windsor as a small boy to see Victoria. The latter was a strong disciplinarian, and George, who was restless and stubborn, frequently felt the weight of her displeasure. When breakfast retreat under the table as punishment. George disappeared and remained quiet for fifteen minutes. When Victoria asked him if he would be good, George replied meekly in the affirmative, whereupon he was permitted to emerge. The Queen was speechless with astonishment when the prince crawled out naked, having stripped and piled his clothes neatly underneath. The same quaint sense of humor frequently cropped out when a naval cadet, and afterwards as officer he played many practical jokes on his messmates.

Where He Felt It.

A story is told concerning Prince Edward of Wales (now Prince of Wales), who recently was asked by a companion at Dartmouth College what he felt like being the eldest son of the Prince of Wales and future King. "Don't you feel it is a great responsibility being the eldest son?" asked the friend, who was of a serious turn of mind.
"Well, I don't know about that," said the prince. "I've never thought of it that way—it's always been me great luck to be born the eldest because when you're eldest you haven't got to wear any of your brother's old clothes!"

Has Prepared Himself.

Queen Mary is the person who has to be reckoned with in the next reign. She has been preparing herself for the position in the same way that a student might read for law or medicine. She has made a study of royal statecraft, and knows down to the tiniest detail exactly her powers and possibilities and those of her husband. Most persons wonder at the extraordinary change in the new Queen since her marriage. From being a gay, frolicsome girl, the life and soul of every entertainment, she turned into a grave, almost gloomy woman, silently going her way, solemnly devoted to her duty.

System in Saving.

"The only good plan for saving is to make it an invariable rule to deposit something each week or each month," says a bank president. "Having thus put the money aside, it should be considered out of reach and on no account to be drawn upon except in case of sickness, loss of employment or death. It is surprising how money will pile up when such a system as this is followed. If every one who possesses any income at all would adopt the practice and stick to it, no matter how small the deposits might be, poverty would be well nigh abolished."

"The Peacemaker."

The Queen always was remarkable for sound sense. At home in her girlhood at White Lodge, where the family temper ran high during family reverses, she was known as "the peacemaker." Much of her youth was passed in Florence, where the Teck family retired when their fortunes were wrecked, and she is highly artistic. She is splendidly educated, speaking four languages—French, German and Italian, as well as her own, with accuracy and fluency. She sings excellently, is a fine pianist and reads voraciously not only novels but serious books.

Resembles Queen Charlotte.

Queen Mary is proud of her striking likeness to her great-grandmother, Queen Charlotte, and buys every picture of her that comes into the market. A woman collector outbid her for one of them at the Duke of Cambridge's sale and refused to sell it even at a premium, which greatly angered the new Queen, and the next time she met this woman she snubbed her. The resemblance, though strong, does not flatter the new Queen.

Women's Wants.

Man wants but little here below, but woman wants everything that other women have.

Industry.

It is not enough to be industrious. So are the ants. What are you industrious about?—Thoreau.

The Late W. Clayton, Flesherton
Died May 5th, aged 78 years

Hutton Hill.

A young lad by the name of Willie Bugles, who has resided with Mrs. Wm. Alexander for four years for reasons best known to himself took it into his head this spring that he would seek his fortune in some other locality. Mrs. Alexander is very much affected over the loss of her little boy, as she had naturally become very much attached to him, having had him under her care for so long a time. She always spoke very highly of him, as an honest, industrious and very truthful boy. Before leaving the neighborhood he visited at Messrs. T.F. Mighton, T.J. Milligan, and T.E. Hutton's for a few days, and they wish him success, wherever he may locate.

Mr. A. Hopkins spent part of the 13th inst. with his brother, Mr. Wm Hopkins.

We are sorry to chronicle that Mrs. W. Sharp is not enjoying her usual good health.

A large number from here attended the funeral of Mrs. J. Ewen, Aberdeen, the 14th inst., and our burg desires to extend their deep sympathy to the bereaved husband and family.

Mr. McMann is now renewing his efforts to clear the jam on the Saugeen river.

We are glad to be able to report that Mrs. T.J. Milligan is rapidly improving, and Mr. and Mrs. Milligan have the sympathy of the vicinity in the death of their two infant daughters.

A number from here attended the funeral of Mr. and Mrs. A. Lawrence's daughter, Miss Martha, of Glenelg. The sorrowing family have the sympathy of their friends and acquaintances in their bereavement.

Miss C.H. Hutton, who received an urgent letter last Saturday from the firm in Buffalo, N.Y., where she was previously engaged as saleslady, left the 23rd inst. to resume her duties.

WHY LIGHTNING RODS ARE POINTED.

The reason a lightning rod has a sharp point is because a fine point offers no resistance to the discharge of electricity, and in order that a cloud may be emptied of it noiselessly and harmlessly. The degree of resistance is in proportion to the surface of the object. If the rod were surmounted by a knob, for instance, the discharge would be violent. But many a lightning rod has received an electrical discharge when the people in the building below were calmly unconscious of the fact. Noncorrosive metal is used for the point of the rod, as corrosion makes resistance. The difference between a point and a ball is shown in discharging a battery. The full charge from a large battery would be received quietly on a metal point, while a moderate charge from a small one would explode violently on a ball. It is said that a full charge may be passed harmlessly through a person's body if received on the point of a needle, whereas, the same charge received on a charger with a ball or knob on the end, would mean instant death.
