EXIST. I asked him how we were to die, and he smiled as though he was holding something back as a surprise for us. He came as near to laughing as I've ever seen him when I asked him if he'd forgotten my wharves.
'Why don't you have them here?' he asked. 'We're not ready,' said I. 'The six months are not up for nine days yet.' I also made the interesting discovery that suits have already been brought in England to break the will on the grounds of insanity."
"But what good will that do us if we are to die here?" exclaimed Bobby Browne.
"None whatsoever," said Chase calmly. "You must admit, however, that you exhibited signs of hereditary insanity by coming here in the first place. I'm beginning to believe that there's a streak of it in my family too."
"And you--you saw him killed?"
asked the princess in an awed voice, low and full of horror.
"Yes, I could not avoid it."
"They killed him on your--on your--"
She could not complete the sentence, but shuddered expressively.
"Yes. He deserved death, princess.
I am more or less like the Moslem in one respect. I might excuse a thief or a murderer, but I have no pity for a traitor."
"You saw him killed?" she said in the same awed voice, involuntarily drawing away from him.
"Yes," he said, "and you would have seen him killed, too, if you had gone down with me to appear against him." She looked up quickly and then thanked him almost to a whisper.
