ROBERT BURNETT

CARRIED OFF BY A LION.

Thrilling Experience of a Ranger in the Transvaal.

Two men at least have given accounts of their sensations when they were carried off by lions—the great explorer Livingstone and a man named Wolhuter, a ranger of game preserves in the Transvaal. Wolhuter's adventure is not secondary in interest to Livingstone's experience. His story, which was attested by the certificate of the magistrate of the district, was substantially as follows:

He was riding along a Kafir path about an hour after sunset. It had been a long march, and he had pushed on ahead of his companions. His dog barked at something, and a moment later Wolhuter saw a lion crouching close to him on the right hand side. The ranger turned his horse sharply, a circumstance that no doubt caused the lion to miss the spring.

Wolhuter was unseated. At the same moment he saw another lion coming from the opposite direction. The horse rushed off, with the first lion in pursuit, and the second lion picked Wolhuter up almost before he touched the ground and gripped him by the right shoulder in such a position that he was face up, with his legs and body dragging underneath the beast. The lion trotted down the path, uttering a loud, growling, purring noise.

Wolhuter's sensations were not those of Livingstone, who said he was in a state of apathy, with entire absence of pain during the time the lion had him. The game ranger suffered terribly, both mentally and physically, and saw no possible way of escape. The lion took him nearly 200 yards.

Suddenly Wolhuter bethought him of his sheath knife, which he carried in his belt behind his right hip. On reaching a large tree with overhanging roots the lion stopped, whereupon Wolhuter stabbed him twice in the side with his left hand. It was ascertained afterward that the first stab touched the bottom of the heart and that the second one slit it down for some distance. The lion immediately dropped Wolhuter, and again the game ranger struck him, this time in the throat, severing an artery.

The lion jumped back and stood facing him, growling. Wolhuter scrambled to his feet, shouting at the top of his lungs. He expected the beast to come at him again, but it did not. Instead, it turned slowly and, still growling, went a few paces. Soon its growling turned to moans. These, in turn, ceased, and the ranger knew that the beast was then dead.

Wolhuter got up the tree as fast as his injured arm would permit, and hardly was he seated when the first lion, which had been after the horse, came back on the trail of blood. By this time the plucky ranger was so faint that he tied himself to the tree to prevent himself from falling out.

He was found by his companions, who took him to a place of safety. The lion he had killed was an old male, and the weapon used was an ordinary sheath knife.—New York Tribune.

Peculiarities of Lichens.

The lichen is remarkable for the great age to which it lives, there being good grounds for believing that the plants endure for 100 years. Their growth is exceedingly slow, almost beyond belief, indicating that only a little nourishment is necessary to keep them alive. In a dry time they have the power to suspend growth altogether, renewing it again at the fall of rain. This peculiarity alone is enough to make the lichen a vegetable wonder, as it is a property possessed by no other species of plant. Another interesting fact about lichens is that they grow only where the air is free from dust and smoke. They may be said to be a sure indication of the purity of the air, as they are never found growing in cities and towns where the atmosphere is impregnated with dust, soot, smoke and other impurities.

Tingling Ears.

If your ears burn, people say, some one is talking about you. This is very old, for Pliny says, "When our ears do glow and tingle some do talk of us in our absence."

Shakespeare in "Much Ado About Nothing" makes Beatrice say to Ursula and Hero, who had been talking of her, "What fire is in mine ears?" Sir Thomas Browne ascribes this conceit to the superstition of guardian angels, who touch the right ear if the talk is favorable and the left if otherwise. This is done to cheer or warn.

One ear tingles, some there be That are snarling now at me!

The Advice Seeker.

"When a man asks me for advice," said the good-natured person, "I always find myself getting into a discussion."

"Well," replied Mr. Sirius Barker, "most of us ask for advice because we would rather argue than work."—Washington Star.

Unpeeled.

Mr. Recentmarrie (who has punned a spoon into dish preparatory to helping to the pudding)—Why, Mary, I feel some hard, smooth, round things in the dish. I wonder what they can be. Mrs. Recentmarrie—Why, they're eggs, John; there are six, just as the recipe says.—Chicago News.

Stupid People.

Traveler—Haven't you a time table? Station Agent—We used to have one until the people began to think the trains were supposed to keep to it.—Fliegende Blatter.

Another bunch of Hallowe's disturbers were rounded up since last issue. They all pleaded guilty and paid up, or promised to pay. Somewhere about five dollars apiece was the amount they had to separate themselves from the fun they indulged in. That's easy, but it may be a lesson for the future. It's natural for boys to get funny sometimes, but they should confine their actions to harmless fun, and not indulge in anything destructive. If the boys who broke the windows in the McKechnie factory could be rounded up, and severely fined, it might do them good.

On Thursday last, our old time honored friend, Rev. John Wells of Ailsa Craig, gave us a very unexpected call. We first became acquainted in 1883 while teaching in the county of Middlesex, Ontario. Wells being the pastor of a Presbyterian church at Nairn and Beechwood. In the early 90's while the writer was teacher at Fiesherston, Mr. Wells was called to the pastorate of the Presbyterian church there, and remained until the fall of 1896, when he went to Holland, Manitoba, where he remained for some years, retiring some five years ago on account of ill-health, and subsequent confinement in the hospital. It is fifty years since we last met, and notwithstanding his own bodily afflictions, and the loss of two bright members of his family, a son and a daughter, both full grown, we are pleased to see him so well and active. His son died just after graduating in medicine, and his daughter while in Manitoba.

Death on Thursday carried off one of Walkerton's officials, the person of Mr. Ed. Kilmer, who for years has occupied the position of assessor and tax collector for the town. Mr. Kilmer was one of the oldest residents of Walkerton, coming to this town about forty-five years ago. He was born near Trenton some seventy-six years ago and in the early years was a telegraph operator being among the first of those in the country. He came up here and was engaged in the bricklaying, owning the yards in the west end of town. Then too he kept store here with a man named Hunter. He afterwards kept store in Durham and Kincaidine, but has resided in Walkerton continuously for the past fifteen years. To those who knew him well, Mr. Kilmer was a genial, whole souled man, and his friends were always pleased to see him coming round. The funeral, which was private, took place on Saturday afternoon. Three sons, George, K. C. of Toronto, John, of Vancouver, and William, of Spokane, survive. His wife predeceased him a couple of years ago.—Telescope.
