A CAREFUL MAN.

The parsimony of the old New Englander of the type now almost vanished was nobly exemplified in Mr. Benny Huntingdon, who lived with his maiden sister in a little town in Western Massachusetts.

Neither had ever spent a penny unnecessarily, and when, in his old age, Mr. Benny became crippled with "the rheumatiz," and hobbled as well, strange flutterings of the heart, which were unrelieved by the best recommended "yarb teas," they were greatly shocked at their suggestions and warnings of their friend to send for a doctor.

Mr. Benny refused, declared his scorn of the entire medical profession and continued to save his pennies. But the pain grew worse. Mr. Benny was confined to his bed in great agony, and heard some of the neighbors telling his sister that he was going to die.

The woman shook her curly head, And answered "no." Persistently the fellow plead; He wouldn't go.

She told him there was little hope; His tongue still ran. How could a fragile woman cope With such a man? His case he never ceased to press With voice that shook.

And so at last she murmured 'yes' And bought his book.
