HOW ARE YOU GOING TO VOTE?

How are you going to vote? An election is drawing near; the question is in order. Are you going to vote intelligently? If so you must dig down into questions that are before us, and try and understand what are the real issues. Are you going to vote in an unprejudiced way? If so, try and forget your party affiliations, and don't let politicians pervert you with their one-sided arguments. Keep your eyes wide open and your temper sweet. Are you going to vote unselfishly? Don't just ask whether reciprocity or something else will benefit the one little show that you are running; you are a part of a great nation, and ought to vote remembering that. It's really an important question. How are you going to vote?

LIBERAL CONVENTION

a failure, and they decided after fruitless efforts at negotiation to give up the task until the United States would make advances. They did so and the present agreement is the result of negotiations made by Mr. Fielding and the speaker.

The Agreement had been accepted by the United States Congress and Senate and is now a law on their statutes. If Canadians wanted it, all they had to do was to say so by their votes on the 21st of September. The Conservatives said the Government had no mandate from the people to allow Reciprocity to become law. He knew of no Canadian statesman who ever passed a resolution to show that the Canadian people did not want reciprocal trade relations with the United States. He thought to-day that the Canadian people were in favor of reciprocity and for one Liberal who would leave the party on account of it, ten Conservatives would be willing to support it.

When the agreement was first announced, the Conservatives did not oppose it, but the opposition gradually grew till the work was obstructed.

The obstructionists began somewhat mildly, but rapidly grew worse in denouncing the Commission who had negotiated the treaty. First they (Mr. Fielding and Mr. Paterson) were referred to as "two elderly gentlemen," next "two old men," next "two old fogeys," and last, "two old ladies, who should have been asleep thirty years ago."

He also referred good naturedly to the way he was caricatured, but he said he didn't blame the artist, who tried to be true to nature, and no good artist could follow nature closely and make a pretty picture from such a model.

Talking of his early political life, he said he had the good sense to sit and listen rather than get up and talk too much during his first parliamentary career. For his silence in the House he was brought to task by Mr. McAlister, father of Mr. W. E. McAlister, of this locality. The critical gentleman thought he ought to be heard from oftener, but the speaker decided to wait his time, as a new member is liable to lose his influence by having too much to say.

The Agreement, he said, was not a treaty, and he urged upon the electors to give it a trial, and if it did not work out well, they could have it repealed. "If you don't accept it now," he went on to say, "when will you get another opportunity? You can't be injured by giving it a trial," he urged. He thought it was an insult to the people of Canada to talk of closer trade relations injuring their loyalty.

He contended that the Railways would not lose by the passing of the Agreement. He said it would take all the money Canada can spend, and all the money Jim Hill can supply to build the railroads that will be necessary to transport the large output our Great West will produce in the course of a few years.

In speaking of the spending of the Government, he said they spent three times as much as the Conservatives spent, but they had the money to spend. Notwithstanding this, the public debt now is less per head than when the Liberals came into power.

As he had to catch the four o'clock train he brought his address to a rather abrupt conclusion, but the Liberals felt pleased at the results.

Mr. Miller appealed to the electors for their support, and the National Anthem closed the proceedings.

TAFT AND LAURIER WOULD DISUNITE THE EMPIRE

A CHANGE OF TUNE

It is not many months ago that Sir Wilfrid Laurier in one of his speeches said:—

"Canada to-day is not in favor of reciprocity. There was a time when Canadians, beginning with myself, would have given many things to obtain the American market, BUT THANK HEAVEN, THOSE DAYS ARE PASSED AND OVER."

Nor was it long ago that Sir Wilfrid declared:—

"There was a time when we were wanting reciprocity with the United States, but our efforts and our offers were put aside and negated. We have said good-bye to that trade and we now put all our hopes upon the British trade."

Nor are all the people yet dead, who heard Sir Wilfrid in impassioned and ringing tones cry:—

"But I have found that the best and most effective way to maintain friendship with our American neighbors is to be absolutely independent of them"

Any comment on these quotations from Sir Wilfrid's speeches of a year or two ago is quite superfluous. What has brought about such a remarkable and sudden change on a matter of such vital consequence to the future of this country? Will Sir Wilfrid kindly explain? No, he won't! An explanation is impossible. But all Canadians can still echo his pious sentiment, "Thank Heaven, those days when we favored reciprocity are past and over."

UNDERMINING BRITISH INFLUENCE.

It is confidently expected and hoped in the United States that reciprocity will permanently undermine British influence in Canada and lead to the Dominion being annexed by the Americans. The leading newspapers of the United States and many Senators and Congressmen, headed by President Taft himself, frankly avow the fact. Here are President Taft's own words, taken from his message to Congress;—

"The greatest reason for adopting this agreement, is the fact that it is going to unite two countries with kindred people, and lying together across a wide continent in a commercial and social union."

Later on, at Atlanta, President Taft further advocated the scheme of commercial union;

"Canada is at the parting of the ways. If we now neglect this opportunity to bring about closer relations, we shall throw away an opportunity not likely to recur."

Then again at New York last April, he spoke in favor of reciprocity because it would prevent the British ban. Here are his own words:—

"I have said this is a critical time in solution of the question of reciprocity. It is critical because, unless it is now decided favorably to reciprocity, it is exceedingly probable that no such opportunity will ever again come to the United States. The forces which are at work in England and in Canada to separate her by a Chinese Wall from the United States, and to make her part of an Imperial Commercial band, reaching from England around the world to England again, by a system of Preferential Tariffs, will derive an impetus from the rejection of this treaty; and, if we would have reciprocity with all the advantages I have described and that I earnestly and sincerely believe will follow its adoption, we must take it now or give it up forever."

Mr. Taft speaks as plainly as he dares. Everybody can see that annexation is his goal. Indeed, he instructed his Secretary of Agriculture to write a letter giving the following as a culminating reason why the farmers of the United States should favor reciprocity;—

"Adoption of the pending reciprocity treaty, would, from the National standpoint, be as much an act of wisdom as was the adoption of treaties in the past that have added to our own country more than half its present area."

These words can bear no other interpretation than that Canada by virtue of the reciprocity treaty will become practically part of the United States.

We all remember the declaration of Mr. Champ Clark, now leader of

"I am in favor of the reciprocity treaty because I hope to see the day when the American flag will float over every square foot of the British North American possessions clear to the North Pole."

The Hon. Samuel McCall, who brought the reciprocity Bill before the House of Representatives in January last, proclaimed in unmistakably clear terms his belief in the ultimate result of reciprocity;—

"The entangling web that is woven by reciprocal trade will be more quickly brought to the inevitable day when the Republic and the Dominion shall be politically one country."

Could anything be clearer than these words of Mr. McCall? Not unless the following words of Senator Cummins are more plain;—

"I am for the annexation of Canada. If it were generally understood that Canadian annexation was the purpose of the pending pact, it doubtless would help the measure in becoming law here."

Senator McCumber, and Congressmen Prince and Madden all expressed their belief and hope that reciprocity means annexation. "Canadian annexation is the logical conclusion of reciprocity with Canada," said Senator McCumber. "It is the first step toward annexation," said Mr. Prince. "My hope is that the territory lying north of us may become a part of the United States," said Mr. Madden.

Ex-Governor Bachelor, of New Hampshire, and Mr. Fiske, of the Michigan Legislature are among the many public men of the United States who have lately declared in favor of annexation.

Mr. J. J. Hill, the railway potentate, speaks strongly for reciprocity saying frankly that he favors it because it will prevent the commercial federation of the British Empire. Many American newspapers advocate Reciprocity on grounds that it will destroy Great Britain's influence on this continent and prevent all possibility of Imperial Federation. "A growing union of North American interests redounding to the advancement and ascendancy of the United States at the expense of Great Britain will be the glorious results of Reciprocity," declares the Milwaukee Free Press."

Emnity to England and total disregard of Canada's wishes and interests characterize all the utterances of American publicists and newspapers on the subject of reciprocity. The Americans want Canada for the sake of her natural resources, and they want her too in order that Great Britain may be driven from the continent.
