THE TENDERFOOT'S WOOLING

scattered.

"Didn't try to rush the ranch then?"

"Broke the store-house and got the guns while we were at the stacks."

"Might have known that they would try that. What did you all want to go to the stacks for? Didn't calculate to blow them out, did you?"

Al hung his head. It is dispiriting when you have a great story to tell, to have it understood and sentence pronounced before you have had time to open your lips.

"How many Injuns were there?"

"About fifteen, I guess."

"More than that," said the man who had not been there, but he did not stop to argue or hear any more details. He remembered the two bands which he had seen on his way to Soda Creek, and he knew all that it was vital to know, so he followed Protheroe quietly to the house.

The doctor's report was a good one and soon made. When sober he was a capable man, and Anstruther's injuries, however painful, were sufficiently simple.

"A bundle of nerves, fine bred and high strung," was Protheroe's comment. "A steer who had had the same smash up would have gone on feeding. These ribs broken, badly shaken up, and bruised a bit of course; but the ribs have knit already. You did the right thing, Mrs. Rolt. These are your hands?"

"No, they are Jim's."

"Of course, I ought to have known Jim's packing; effective, but a trifle severe. Here, let me loosen them a little," and his deft fingers, which were as delicate as a woman's and as strong as a man's, played about Anstruther with astonishing rapidity.

"That's better, isn't it?"

Anstruther sighed. "Yes, I can move now, I think, without fainting."

"But you must not, at least, not much. Jim was on the right track, but he certainly did not give you much play. You don't drink much, do you?"

"No, not much."

"And you're not twenty-five, Lord! Lord! What could hurt a man who doesn't drink and isn't twenty-five? Your case was not worth the ride, but perhaps we may have others," he added cheerfully, "now that old Khelowna has broken out."

As soon as the doctor's inspection was over, a council of war was held in the dining-room, whilst Jim and the doctor cut themselves vast chunks from the boiled salted beef on the table.

"Pity that the boys did not overhaul some of them," said Jim.

"Yes, it would have saved a hull lot of trouble," agreed Al. "We could have given them their medicine right there. Now we've got to take it to them."

"You think they can't afford to leave things as they are," asked Rolt. "I don't think about it. I ain't really to be done I should take my best man with me. See?"

Finally it was arranged in this way, and in the dark, long after the ladies had retired to rest, Dick Rolt stood for a minute looking down at the face he loved, so white and calmly lovely in the moonlight.

It was too white, he thought, and then a hideous vision came to him of how that face might be when he next saw it.

"What a fool I am," he muttered to himself, "and all because a parcel of white livered Siwash burned my stacks. Even that was rather heroic for them."

But when he reached over his horse's shoulder for Jim's hand, which he gripped hard, his voice had a queer ring in it.

"You won't let any harm happen to her, Jim?"

"Not whilst I'm a'le," and if "her" meant Polly to one man and Kitty to another it made no difference since the two were together.

Then Rolt turned away from the corral and rode silently with his men through the night, believing that he had spared his wife the pain of parting and hidden from her the risk which he was running, not knowing, kindly fool that he was, that she had read him like a book; that her heart had yearned to him as he stood silently praying over her, marking but not guessing the cause of her paleness and that she, not he, was the one who had spared the other the pain of that which they knew could not be avoided.

A rancher's wife, like a soldier's, is obliged sometimes to take chances even with the life of her best beloved. If not there would be no ranching.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

Our baseballists went to Durham on Monday and tried conclusions with the team of that town. Of course Durham would have won had it not been for the umpire. Experts as they are, they should have won over umpire and team. As it was, the score stood a tie, 9 all. The game was called on account of darkness.

Mr. Jas. Durant, though bordering on the four score mark, went to Harriston on Saturday last to learn of reciprocity. He was delighted with the Borden address, and also that of I.B. Lucas.

Amongst those who left for the West on the first excursion were Messrs. A. Hamilton, A. Baird, J. Horsburgh, T. Hunt, A. Smith.
