FOSTER AT HANOVER

the fact that the American people are also producers and exporters of the very articles that we pro- duce and export. They also fail to lay bare the facts that by open- ing our markets to the United States, we also open our markets to the "twelve most favored na- tions," who are also producers and exporters of the same goods as we have to sell. They fail also to emphasize the fact that each of the favored nations can send their products into Canada free of duty, while Canadians have to face a duty if their products are sent to any country included amongst the favored nations, and again, the United States tariff walls are up- against the favored nations, and their goods cannot be landed in the United States without the pay- ment of duty. This exposes the Canadian market to the United States, and the twelve favored na- tions, against none of whom we can protect ourselves by the im- posing of a tariff.

But the Liberals say you can give the agreement a trial, and if it doesn't work out well, it can easily be abolished. The agree- ment, when it is abolished, if it cannot easily be abolished, if the people, by their votes on the 21st of September, authorize the Gov- ernment to give reciprocity a trial, they may seek in vain for redress in a year from now if they find it unsatisfactory to one interest or another. Sir Wilfrid Laurier can then say, "You au- thorized us to make the bargain, and to break that bargain the peo- ple must be heard from in a gen- eral election." The agreement once made, must remain so until the people, by their votes, say it must be repealed; that is, it must remain at least during the life of one parliament, a period of five years.

In the adoption of the recipro- city agreement, Mr. Foster saw a very damaging effect on the east and west roads, on which our country had spent millions of money, to increase our interpro- vincial trade, and our trade with the mother land. With the advent of reciprocity, the Jim Hill roads, now poking their noses up against the Canadian boundary line, would enter the Dominion, and act like blood suckers on our great trans- continental arteries of traffic. Our railroads, and our railroad em- ployees would be put out of busi- ness while American roads and American railroad men would be furnished with employment in the transportation of our grain crops.

The American mills, Mr. Foster said, are often idle for want of grain. They are capable of grinding half as much again as they have to grind. The Ameri- cans do not want our wheat to feed their people. They want it to give employment to idle Ameri- can mills, and idle American workmen. The wheat will be car- ried over American lines of rail- way, handled by American labor, ground in American mills, the offal used for the feeding of American stock and the enrichment of American soil. The flour will be shipped over American roads to Boston or New York, sent in Ameri- can vessels to Liverpool, and the money returned to the Ameri- can people. As we are now, the hauling will be done on Cana- dian railroads, the grinding in Canadian mills, the work by Cana- dian labor, the transportation over Canadian railroads again, the shipping in Canadian vessels, the selling in Liverpool by Canadian salesmen, and the whole product, for production and manufacturing, returned to the Canadian people. The Americans do not want our wheat to feed their own people, but to send it to Liverpool, where we should send it, and get all the profits of manufacturing and transportation, and labor.

Reference was made to Sir Wil- frid Laurier's pleadings in Quebec province, where he is asking the electors to follow his "white plumes," and be led to prosper- ity. In 1879, if they had followed his white plumes against the Na- tional Policy, and in 1891 if they had followed his white plumes for the Commercial Union, prosperity would not have perched upon their banner, nor is it wisdom now to follow the white plumes of the leader, and adopt the reciprocity pact. With strong emphasis, the speaker declared that he could not understand by what midsummer or midwinter madness Mr. Fielding and Mr. Paterson had negotiated such a bargain in the face of good and prosperous times in Canada. The ideal reciprocity would be with such a country as the West Indies, where our prod- uces grow altogether different, they grow what we want, but cannot produce, and we grow what they want and cannot pro- duce, on account of the differences in the climate. An intercolonial preferential trade between Eng- land and her colonies would ben- efit the British people, and the British colonies. England pro- duces but very little, in propor- tion to her population, and the recent disastrous strike, notwith- standing her free trade policy, showed to the world that without food, she was within thirty days of being on the verge of starva- tion. They cannot live within themselves. They must import the bulk of what they consume. They can use all that Canada and the Colonies can spare, and be still far from being supplied. We should keep and cultivate our trade with the mother country, where we can always find a ready market for everything in our foodstuff we have to spare.

BRYERTON—KERNEY. A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Kerney, at Bonnie View, on August 2nd, when their daughter, Olive Gladys, was united in mar- riage to Mr. Leslie Victor Bryer- ton, of Loreburn, Sask. The cere- mony was performed by Rev. W. H. Thompson, under a beautiful arch of green trees on the lawn, the bride being attended by her youngest sister, Bella, while C. J. Leekens acted as groomsmen. The bride, prettily gowned in white silk with all-over net, entered the arch on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Tokalovsky. After the ceremony the bridal party re- ceived the congratulations and good wishes of the friends, and then entered the house, where all partook of a sumptuous repast.

The remainder of the evening was spent in the parlor, where all the guests had an enjoyable time, music being furnished by the or- ganist.

Many handsome and useful pre- sents in glass and silverware were received by the bride from her friends. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold bracelet and brooch, and to the bridesmaid a gold brooch.

The bride and groom left the next morning for Regina, where they will take in the pleasures of the Dominion Fair.—Com.
