SPECIAL GRANTS TO AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES.

Section 24 of The Agricultural Societies Act is hereby amended by adding the following subsection:

If the Superintendent on or before the thirty-first day of December in any year receives proof by the joint affidavit of the President and Secretary or Secretary-Treasurer that rain or snow has fallen at the place of holding an exhibition and before three o'clock in the afternoon on any day of the holding of an exhibition, and upon his being satisfied that as a consequence the gate receipts were less than the average of the previous three years of holding the exhibition, the society shall be entitled to receive a grant equal to one half of the difference between the gate receipts of the current year and the average of the gate receipts of the previous three years, but the amount to be paid shall not exceed three hundred dollars, and the total amount so paid to all societies shall not exceed ten thousand dollars.—R. S. O. 10 (Edw., c. 19, s. 24.

WHAT WE HAVE WE SHOULD HOLD

The Bulk of Canada's Natural Products Consumed at Home—Why Sacrifice a Reality for an Uncertainty?

Can the farmers of Canada afford to risk the breaking up of their home-market? The market of the United States is in the hands of big and powerful trusts, who fix prices with little regard to the interest or wishes of consumer or producer.

Now let us look at the conditions as to root crops. The home market consumed $53,500,000 worth, and the rest of the world bought $1,059,637 worth of our principal root crop, such as is used in every home.

VALUE OF AN INDUSTRY

Its Great Monetary Worth to the Community Where It is Located

An interesting and accurate calculation has been made of what an industry employing 1,000 hands means to a community: It increases the population by 5,000 consumers. It adds $90,000 to the value of public utilities.

The expenditure in clothing would be $168,750. With the annual payment of taxes added to the total expenditure on buildings, food and clothing, you have in all $2,428,350 turned into the town in one year through the coming of one great industry.

quence the gate receipts were less than the average of the previous three years of holding the exhibition, the society shall be entitled to receive a grant equal to one half of the difference between the gate receipts of the current year and the average of the gate receipts of the previous three years, but the amount to be paid shall not exceed three hundred dollars, and the total amount so paid to all societies shall not exceed ten thousand dollars.—R. S. O. 10 (Edw., c. 19, s. 24.

Through Ontario With the British-Born

By ARTHUR HAWKES.

I have found an employer who advertises "Old Countrymen preferred." He is Moore, of Meaford, and he talks to his Englishmen as if they were his blood brethren.

Afterwards Moore explained himself to me. He manufactures wood mallets in Meaford. A Quebecer he spent eighteen years in New England. He had a hard time himself, to begin with—as hard as the British have who abound in the North Atlantic States.

"Now and then one comes along," he said, "who is a bluff; but the wood-cutter from England is thorough and reliable. He soon gets on to our way of doing things, and I always get him when I can.

The modesty of the English in Canada is not an over-written theme. Indeed, the quality is often thought to be somewhat obscure. That little matter of the aspirate is rather upsetting, but as a quiet fellow from Northamptonshire said to me on the way up from Allandale: the way the careless Englishman forgets and fabricates his catches is nothing to the honestly-meant reflections of English speech you see in cartoons and stories like those that frequently adorn The Toronto Telegram.

"What's the matter with Meaford?" I asked. "Nothing," he replied, "only it's too quiet. It ain't like the Elephant and Castle." This delightful man likes to tell himself he isn't quite so happy here, because Meaford isn't giddy enough for one, long years accustomed to the Elephant. But when he comes to sort out his ideas he remembers that the doctor told him to clear out of London if he wanted to save the only child of eleven that survived.

"Is the child better in Meaford?" I inquired. "Is she?" he said, with a smile from here to here. "Go and have a look at her. And there's another since we got here—lively as kittens both of 'em." "And would you like them to be playing around the Elephant," said I. "Not by a darned sight," he said. To come straight from London to this tree-blessed, breezy resort on Georgian Bay, is a mighty change for a man in his forty-fifth year.

THE FARMERS' FRIEND AT OTTAWA

There is one member of the Government that the farmers, and especially the farmers of Ontario, will do well to bear in mind. That man is Mr. Fielding. Unless the memories of men with empty pockets and sore hearts is shorter than we think there will be many on September 21st who will show by their votes that they regard the founder of the Farmers' Bank as unfit to have a predominant influence in the policy of this country.

One of the chief functions of the Minister of Finance is to exercise a strict supervision over the banking system. The banks are the pulse of our whole financial system. The prosperity of the whole country is bound up in their stability and reliability. With this in mind the Legislature has placed stringent restrictions on the granting of charters and has given to the finance minister the extraordinary power of enquiring into the financial position of any capitalists asking for a banking charter.

This solemn duty to the people Mr. Fielding neglected. But that is not all. If Mr. Fielding had been merely negligent or stupid we might not have been surprised. But Mr. Fielding did more and worse. In spite of the warnings of responsible men,—men of standing in the banking world, such as Mr. E.B. Osler; in spite of obvious irregularities which would have startled many who have never claimed to be heaven-born financiers, Mr. Fielding persisted in granting a charter to The Farmers Bank, which was managed by a man notoriously unfit in every way to enjoy the privileges of the Banking Act.

Mr. Fielding is said to be a poor man, grown poor in the service of this country. He has grown so poor that he has swallowed all the noble sentiments which he and other Liberal leaders vociferated on the subject of presents to cabinet ministers. Bit Mr. Fielding has swallowed more than that. He has swallowed one gilded pill, which sweetened the whole mess of pottage. His devoted and self-sacrificing public service appealed so strongly to the generosity of some of our leading financiers and contractors, that they made Mr. Fielding a present of $120,000 presumably for nothing. Mr. Fielding no doubt does not know where the money came from. Like Mr. Oliver, however, he will assuredly claim to know several places that it did not come from. No doubt the Farmers Bank is one of these.

Perhaps Mr. Fielding, with his $120,000 still feels poor. Is he as poor as many of those whom the failure of the Farmers Bank has left in their declining years, to face anew, the struggle for existence, their hands grown weary, and their hearts faint? What do they think of Mr. Fielding as a leader of the people? Does Mr. Fielding ever think of the many families reduced to beggary through what we will in all charity call his folly. Does he ever think of tapping this mysterious $120,000 and using it for the relief of the poor depositor of the Farmers Bank, so that his lot may be somewhat lightened? These and similar considerations will naturally occur to everyone who is asked to vote for Mr. Fielding, and the hybrid pact which he and Mr. Knox have produced.
