KEITH OF THE BORDER

"What has occurred?"
"The action has only really begun," he assured her, still retaining his hold upon her hand. "This was merely a preliminary skirmish, and you must prepare to bear your part in what follows. We have settled Mr. Hawley for the present, and now must deal with his gang."

"Oh, what would I have done if you had not been here?"

"Let us not think about that; we were here, and now have a busy night before us if we get away safely. Give me the rope first. Good! Here, Neb, you must know how to use this—not too tight, but without leaving any play to the rope; take the knife out of his belt. Now for the cloth, Miss Maclaire."

"Please do not call me that!"
"But you said it didn't make any difference what I called you."
"I thought it didn't then, but it does now."

"Oh, I see; we are already on a new footing. Yet I must call you something."

She hesitated just long enough for him to notice it. Either she had no substitute ready at hand, or else doubted the advisability of confiding her real name under present circumstances to one so nearly a stranger.

"You may call me Hope."
"A name certainly of good omen," he returned. "From this moment I shall forget Christie Maclaire, and remember only Miss Hope. All right, Neb; now turn over a chair, and sit your man up against it. He will rest all the easier in that position until his gang arrives."

He thrust his head out of the door, peering cautiously forth into the night, and listening. A single horse, probably the one Hawley had been riding, was tied to a dwarfed cottonwood near the corner of the cabin. Nothing else was visible.

"I am going to round up our horses, and learn the condition of Hawley's outfit," he announced in a low voice. "I may be gone for fifteen or twenty minutes, and, meanwhile, Miss Hope, get ready for a long ride. Neb, stand here close beside the door, and if any one tries to come in brain him with your gun-stick. I'll rap three times when I return."

He slipped out into the silent night, and crept cautiously around the end of the dark cabin. The distinct change in the girl's attitude of friendship toward him, her every evident desire that he should think well of her, together with the providential opportunity for escape, had left him full of confidence. The gambler had played blindly into their hands, and Keith was quick enough to accept the advantage. It was a risk to himself, to be sure, thus turning again to the northward, yet the clear duty he owed the girl left such a choice almost imperative. He certainly could not drag her along with him on his flight into the wild Comanche country extending beyond the Canadian. She must, at the very least, be first returned to the protection of the semi-civilization along the Arkansas. After that had been accomplished, he would consider his own safety. He wondered if Hope really was her name, and whether it was the family cognomen, or her given name. That she was Christie Maclaire he had no question, yet that artistic embellishment was probably merely assumed for the work of the concert hall. Both he and Hawley could scarcely be mistaken as to her identity in this respect, and, indeed, she had never openly denied the fact. Yet she did not at all seem to be that kind, and Keith mentally contrasted her with numerous others whom he had somewhat intimately known along the border frontier. It was difficult to associate her with that class; she must have come originally from some excellent family East, and been driven to the life by necessity; she was more to be pitied than blamed. Keith held no puritanical views of life—his own experiences had been too rough and democratic for that—yet he clung tenaciously to an ideal of womanhood which could not be lowered. However interested he might otherwise feel, no Christie Maclaire could ever find entrance into the depths of his heart, where dwelt alone the memory of his mother.

He found the other horses turned into the corral, and was able, from their restless movements, to decide they numbered eight. A fire, nearly extinguished, glowed dully at the farther corner of the enclosure, and he crawled close enough to distinguish the recumbent forms of men sleeping about it on the ground. Apparently no guard had been set, the fellows being worn out from their long ride, and confident of safety in this isolated spot. Besides, Hawley had probably assumed that duty, and told them to get whatever sleep they could. However, the gate of the corral opened beside their fire, and Keith dare not venture upon roping any of their ponies, or leading them out past where they slept. There might be clippers in the cabin with which he could cut the wires, yet if one of the gang awoke, and discovered the herd absent, it would result in an alarm, and lead to early pursuit. It was far safer to use their own ponies. He would lead Hawley's horse quietly through the water, and they could mount on the other shore. This plan settled, he went at it swiftly, riding the captured animal while rounding up the others, and fastening the three to stunted trees on the opposite bank. Everything within the cabin remained exactly as he had left it, and he briefly explained the situation, examining Hawley's bonds again carefully while waiting so.

"He'll remain there all right until his men find him," he declared, positively, "and that ought to give us a good six hours' start. Come, Miss Hope, every minute counts now."

He held her arm, not unconscious of its round shapeliness, as he helped her down the rather steep bank through the dense gloom. Then the two men joined hands, and carrying her between them, waded the shallow stream. The horses, not yet sufficiently rested to be frisky, accepted their burdens meekly enough, and, with scarcely a word spoken, disappeared away silently into the darkness of the night.

MUST BE HOME BY TEN

A resident in Vienna who does not wish to be out of pocket must keep early hours. After 10 o'clock at night he is taxed on entering his own house or apartment, or for the matter of that any house or apartment. The "sperrgeld" or door opening tax is not peculiar to Vienna, but is also found in other capitals of Europe.

Vienna is built on the flat or apartment house plan. Rich men and working people alike live in quarters of this kind. The houses are large, having five or six floors, usually with four flats on a floor; so that not infrequently there will be upward of 100 persons living under one roof. There is a common entrance from the street, and after 10 o'clock at night this door is bolted and barred.

The 2,000,000 residents of the Austrian capital are practically imprisoned in their own homes from ten o'clock in the evening until six the next morning. They may go out or in only by paying the equivalent of four cents to the janitor or, as the Austrians call him, the housemaster. This tax must be met every time one passes through the doorway. There is no exception to this rule. A man who has dined with a friend must, if he stays late, pay four cents to get out of his friend's house and four cents more to get into his own. A telegram in the night calls for the payment of the tax before the messenger can enter.

CLEANING THE SILVER

"I don't mind any of the housework except cleaning the silver," sighed a young housewife the other day. "There always seems such a lot of it and my fingers get so dirty and my back so tired—oh, dear. I often feel as if I'd like to use tin forks and spoons."

"There are lots of young housewives who feel the same way, but really it need not be such a task if you go about it right."

An excellent once-a-day way to keep the silver in daily use from becoming too dimmed between its weekly polishings is to add a teaspoonful of good washing powder to the hot rinsing water in which the silver is plunged after being washed in hot soapy water.

Old solid silver that has become deeply discolored through neglect may be beautifully cleaned by boiling it for 15 minutes in water in which a very small lump of washing powder has been dissolved.

When all your silver has been thoroughly cleaned, put that for daily table use in the sideboard drawers and in cases where they may be easily got at. A few cherished large pieces may decorate the top of the sideboard if one likes, but perhaps the prettiest way of furnishing the sideboard is to place tall candle-sticks or candelabra at either end without further decoration.

Dressing table silver should not be too lavishly in evidence. Much of it should be kept in the dressing table drawers. This will prevent much of the discoloration.

All the silver not to be used in the immediate decoration of the house should be packed away in a silver chest, if you are the fortunate possessor of one.

Or wrap each piece separately in chamois, flannel, cotton flannel or heavy linen. Put it all away in an unused dresser or cupboard, where it may be kept under lock and key, yet easily available for immediate use for the big party or in case friends come to dinner.

If you are a housewife you cannot reasonably hope to be healthy or beautiful by washing dishes, sweeping or doing housework all day, and crawling into bed dead tired at night. You must get out into the open air and sunlight. If you do this every day and keep your stomach and bowels in good order by taking Chamberlain's tablets when needed, you should become both healthy and beautiful. For sale by all dealers.

THE SUNNY SIDE OF LIFE

A North Dakota farmer roused his new harvest hand from slumber in the haymow promptly at 3 a. m.

"You can slip down and cut that little patch of oats before breakfast," he ordered.

"Are they wild oats?" sleepily inquired the hired man.

"Wild? Why, no, they're tame."

"Well, if they're tame, maybe I can slip up on them in daylight."

Everybody's Magazine.

"Are those boys' intentions of a bellicose nature?"

"No, mum; they're jest going to fight.—Baltimore American.

It appears that a certain clergyman—a very scholarly man, but one who knew very little about country life, was made Bishop of a rural see. A friend remarked that there was a little farm attached to the episcopal palace.

"You'll be able to keep some animals," he said.

"That will be very nice," said the new Bishop, thoughtfully. "I think I shall keep sheep and have fresh kidneys for breakfast every morning!"

NEW STEAMSHIP SERVICE CHICAGO TO COLLINGWOOD

Steamer Missouri Arrives With Long List of Passengers

Collingwood, July 5.—The Steamer "Missouri" of the Northern Michigan Transportation Company of Chicago, arrived last night with a long list of passengers, establishing another passenger service between Chicago and Collingwood. The steamer was met by the President of the Board of Trade, Mr. M. Byrne, and other members of the Board and a reception was tendered Captain Bright and officers. It is expected that another spacious steamer will be added to the service next season. The steamer cleared for Mackinac Island at 10 p. m., on arrival of train from Toronto. Two beautifully appointed steamers now ply from Collingwood to Chicago by way of the Great Scenic Georgian Bay and North Channel Route.

ROBERT SUTHERLAND DIES AT INGERSOLL

Robert Sutherland, M. P. P., of Dorchester, the member for East Middlesex, died in Ingersoll Hospital last Friday evening unexpectedly. Mr. Sutherland recently underwent an operation for appendicitis and until only a short time before his death was supposed to be recovering rapidly.

Yesterday he was somewhat weaker, and in the afternoon his condition became so alarming that his family was hurriedly summoned. Mr. Sutherland died about six o'clock in the evening.

Deceased was a life-long resident of North Dorchester, where he was born in 1854. He was one of the most progressive farmers in Ontario, and was especially interested in the breeding of thoroughbred horses. No man in the district was more widely known, and his genial disposition won him the host of friends everywhere.

In the recent election Mr. Sutherland made a splendid run, and was returned. Besides his wife he is survived by two sons and two daughters.

During the summer months mothers of young children should watch for any unnatural looseness of the bowels. When given prompt attention at this time, serious trouble may be avoided. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy can always be depended upon. For sale by all dealers.

THE WESTERN FAIR

September 6th to 14th.

The management of this popular Exhibition will spare neither trouble or expense this year to make it the best that has ever been held. A new fire-proof Art Building is being erected near the entrance to the Grounds which will be in readiness for the Exhibition, and will be filled with beautiful and expensive paintings for which very liberal prizes are being offered. This will help very materially the congestion of exhibits of other years in the Main Building. If space is wanted it should be applied for at once. The butter and cheese exhibit promises to be extra large this year. In addition to the prizes offered by the association there are good specials in cash and silverware. Many new and special exhibits will be made in the Machinery Department. The Live Stock Department is one of the strong features of the Exhibition as the very best always comes to London. The Agricultural and Horticultural exhibits will no doubt fill the building to overflowing, of the very best, while the Poultry Building will probably have to be enlarged to hold the birds on Exhibition. Prize lists, entry forms, and all information sent on application to the Secretary, A. M. Hunt, London, Ontario.

SHIP BARNACLES

One of the worst nuisances that sailors have to put up with is barnacles, attaching themselves in great numbers to logs of wood, the bottoms of ships and other floating materials.

The common, or ship barnacle, is a species of shellfish, flexible stalk that is provided with muscles by means of which the creature can elongate or contract itself at will. Upon the end of the stalk there are five shelly valves, the principal organs of the animal being closed within. These valves open and close to admit of the barnacle spreading out and drawing back its net, an apparatus by which it obtains food.

Ship barnacles congregate in such numbers on ships that the latter's sailing powers are seriously impaired. The creatures grow rapidly, at the same time undergoing such wonderful transformation that they are objects of interesting study.

A root cellar like this won a prize last year.

THE drawing was made from a photograph of the root-cellar with which D. A. Purdy, of Lumsden, Sask., won a cash prize in last year's contest. In that last contest there were 36 prizes. There will be three times as many prizes (108) in the

1912 FARMERS' PRIZE CONTEST

THUS you will have three times as many chances of winning a cash prize. You do not have to use any certain amount of Canada Cement to win a prize. There are absolutely no "strings" to this offer.

There are twelve prizes for each Province (three of $50; three of $25; three of $15; and three of $10) and you compete only with other farmers in your own Province and not with those all over Canada.

It makes no difference whether you have ever used cement. Many of last year's winners had not used it until they entered the contest. When you write for full particulars, we will send you, free, a book, "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete," which tells everything you need to know about concrete. It is absolutely free, and you are under no obligation to buy "Canada" Cement or to do anything else for us.

WRITE your name and address on the coupon, and mail it, or see letter or post card, and we will send you at once the book and full particulars of the 1912 Prize Contest.
