AN EXPENSIVE SNOOZE.

From The Tara Leader. One of Tara's bank clerks has come to the conclusion that sleeping in the morning is an expensive pleasure. On Saturday he went to Owen Sound to spend Sunday at his home, and intended returning on the early morning express on Monday, but failed to waken from his peaceful slumbers until long after train time. He having part of the combination of the safe here it was necessary for him to be in Tara in half an hour, and consequently an auto was hired, instructing the chauffeur to make the distance of sixteen miles in thirty minutes if possible. The trip was commenced and they drove through the country at a merry clip, and when they arrived at their destination it was found the trip was made in twenty-five minutes, or about a mile every minute and a half. Constable Briggs happened to be on the street when the auto came down Yonge street at about a forty mile an hour clip, and when the machine stopped he quietly went over to the driver and took his name and asked him to appear before the magistrate for over-stepping the speed limit. The magistrate imposed a fine of $5 and the costs, the costs being $2. The aforesaid bank clerk paid the $5 fine besides $6 for the hire of the auto. It was rather an expensive snooze.

CALENDAR CURIOSITIES.

Know the intricacies of Calculation That Enter Into Its Making.

The year just closed was fifty-three Sundays long. As it came in on Sunday, it goes out on the same day. This, including 1905, occurs but eighteen times in this century. If you are mathematically constructed, it will be easy to understand how the arrangement seems irregular. If you are as frank about it as was Lord Chesterfield in 1751 when he presented a bill to bring British dates into agreement with those of Europe generally, it won't bother. He said he knew nothing about the subject; but he was forced to make the Lords think he did, and to make them think that they also knew, which they didn't.

The next year corresponding to the current calendar will be 1916, and the same will be true of 1922 and 1928. After these, a similar condition will occur in five years, 1933. Then six years will elapse before a fifty-three Sunday calendar, 1939. Then the schedule will swing back to five years, or in 1944. From then there will be fifty-three Sunday in 1950, 1956, 1961, 1967, 1972, 1978, 1984, 1989, 1995 and 2000. A study of this fact will show that no year, leap years excepted, can have fifty-three Sundays unless the year begins on Sunday.

Of course the first day of 1912 was on Monday. April and July follow suit. February and August will start on Thursday; March and November come in on Friday. May will be the only month beginning on Wednesday; June will start on Saturday; September and December on Sunday; October on Tuesday.

Almanac makers and people whose specialty is measuring time and unwinding the eternal dances of the midnight sky, "tell us that the length of day light differs according to its location. Thus, New York's longest day is fifteen hours. London has sixteen and one-half hours. Spitzbergen has three and a half months. Quito on the equator has its day and night equally divided.

Reduced to simple numbers we say that all years contain three hundred and sixty-five days. And unless one is a time specialist, one would say that all the years begin the first day of January. It depends on what kind of a year is considered. The lunar year, for example, has three hundred and fifty-four days, eight hours, forty-eight minutes, and thirty-six seconds. In this year the moon makes a journey round the earth twelve times. As you will readily see, the lunar year is eleven days shorter than the solar year.

Making a Salad.

In his "Random Reminiscences" Mr. Charles Brookfield tells an amusing story of an actor friend, Frank Marshall, an exceedingly popular and accomplished member of the profession, who had lost a finger in early life, and who wore a kid finger-stall partially to conceal the deficiency. Marshall had a pretty talent for mixing salads, and one evening at the Sheridan Club, as his friends dropped in to dine, they noticed him preparing one of the delicious salads of which he alone seemed to know the secret.

Immediately there were cries of "Frank, make me one at the same time"; and "Oh! Frank, made enough for me, too," and, beaming with satisfaction at the compliment to his skill, Frank called for more lettuce, chives, tarragon, and other ingredients. And when he had chopped up his herbs into minute fragments and mixed his salad in his own way everyone was delighted.

A few more neighbors begged for stray leaves, and finally one enthusiastic gourmand wiped the bowl round with a ball of bread, and turned up his eyes in ecstasy as he gulped down his savoury morsel. But the face of the founder of the feast wore a troubled expression.

"What's the matter, Frank?" asked one of his friends. "Oh, nothing," replied Frank, peering round the polished bowl, "only—I only I seem to have lost my finger-stall!"

One View of Modern Children.

Children are never children to themselves. From the standpoint of the grownup the real children we meet in these days are few and far between. To be a real child implies unconsciousness of one's superiority. The trouble with many of the children of to-day is that they have discovered that they are superior. Their advantages are much greater than ours were, and they know it and they rub it in. The old-fashioned licking has gone out and with it the child. In his place is a vastly superior creature who is affable on being approached, condescending under continued contact and capable of any degree of cruelty if his dignity is ruffled.

Lanterns In China

There has long existed among the Chinese a passion for fireworks and lanterns. Travelers have called China the land of lanterns, and the term is apposite. In every city, at every port and on every river and canal as soon as night comes on lanterns make their appearance. They are hung at the door of every dwelling; they swing as pendants from the angles of pagodas; they form the fiery crown of every shop front; they cluster round the houses of the rich and light up the hovels of the poor; they are borne with the carriages of travelers, and they swing from the yards and the masts of vessels.

Primitive Man and Exercise.

Exercise in primitive times was the price of life. It was only after we had learned to live by our wits and to exercise became a luxury that it began to run into fads. If primitive man neglected his all-around Delsartean exercises and let his muscles soften he simply provided a tender soffit for some of his confederates, carnivore or cannibal. It was a case of eat or be eaten, and his motto was "Do it first." The gorgeous possibilities of power through repose had not yet dawned on him. In those days man didn't exercise. He just "humped." He had to.
