Cooking at the Top of a Chimney.
To cook a potato pie at the top of a chimney 300 feet high by means of the heat generated in the fires below would seem an impossible task, yet such a feat was on one occasion accomplished by John Faulkner, a famous Lancashire steeplejack. The incident was the outcome of a wager between Faulkner and the manager of a Manchester gas works, who doubted John's statement regarding the excessive heat. A large iron kettle was procured, and this, being filled with the necessary ingredients—sixty-six pounds in weight—was hoisted to the summit of the huge chimney stack. Faulkner placed the receptacle on the outer and coolest side of the brickwork, but despite this the contents were found to be thoroughly cooked in one hour and twenty minutes, or ten minutes less than the stipulated time. Faulkner won his wager, and the pie, which, it was said, was slightly burned at the bottom, was afterward distributed among the poor of the district.—London Answers.

Our Denatured Food.
Were we a gastronomic nation we should insist on having French or German bread, with crisp, tasty crust, refusing the soggy loaves made of bleached, bolted flour robbed of nutritive phosphates and sources of flavor, refusing also the machine polished rice deprived of its nutritious outer parts, in which lies the delicate flavor of this cereal, leaving it pretty to look at, but, as one of the government agricultural experts, David Fairchild, has forcibly expressed it "as tasteless as the paste that a paper hanger brushes on his rolls of wall paper." We should exclude the chemically greened teas dumped into our groceries because not wanted in any other country. We should protest against the peaches and other fruits, formerly brought into our markets, soft, sui ripened, luscious, but now offered to us hard, unripe, flavorless.—Century.

Tea Drinking in Siam.
Tea is to be found in every tent and dwelling in Siam. There is always a kettle on the fire filled with tea and prepared for drinking, which is done by adding milk, butter and salt. This is their way of fixing this beverage and is said to be pleasant after one becomes accustomed to it. A peculiar mode of hospitality is shown by these people in reference to their tea. It is always at the disposal of every stranger and traveler. He need not ask for it. Neither is it expected that he should, but he must have his own cup. This is imperative, and accordingly every one carries a cup with him at all times. Some of these utensils are marvels of workmanship and are highly valued. They are generally made of some fine grained wood and oftentimes are lined with silver and gold.

Temperature of Volcanoes.
Scientists have secured an accurate measurement of the temperature of boiling lava in a crater. The experiment was a very dangerous one, and it was considered a triumph of precaution no lives were sacrificed in making the test. The crater of Kilauea, in Hawaii, was selected for examination. The work progressed very slowly. For a long time it was impossible to obtain results, but after several thermometers had been destroyed a pyrometer was substituted to advantage. The temperature recorded was 1,010 degrees C., which is the same as 1,850 degrees F. Iron is still unmelted at this heat, but gold, silver and copper become a molten mass at a lower temperature.—Harper's Weekly.

A Pessimist.
The "duffer" at golf becomes so used to finding himself in all kinds of out of the way places that he hits every ball in the confident expectation of getting into difficulties with it. Such a player was he who speaks thus in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch:
"Is this your ball over here?"
"Is it in a hole?"
"Yes."
"A deep hole?"
"Yes."
"With slightly overhanging banks, so you can't possibly get at it?"
"Yes."
"Then it's my ball, all right."

Drinking Horns.
Drinking horns were beloved of the early Saxons, who always took their mead in this manner. Many of the old drinking horns were fashioned from the horns of the rhinoceros under the belief that "it sweats at the approach of poison." Hence, according to this superstition, the drinker would be in a position to tell at once whether an enemy had been tampering with his beverage.—London Globe.

Getting It Straight.
"What did you say to your wife that night when you got home at 11:30?"
"Nothing."
"Do you mean to say—"
"I mean to say that by the time I could get a word in it was no longer last night, but this morning."—Boston Transcript.

An Inherited Weakness.
"Your daughter is improving," said a music teacher, "but when she gets to the scales I have to watch her pretty closely."
"Just like her father," said the mother. "He made his money in the grocery business."

Served Them Right.
He—They have dropped their anchor. She (on her first trip)—Serves them right. It has been hanging over the side all day long.

"Tis not your posterity, but your actions, that will perpetuate your memory.—Butchinson.

She shook her head and said: "Don't blame me—blame the common—get a dozen—day something—stay in—show you something—very pretty—come round and get you—care to see it—don't know what I—go?"

"Oh, no! I'm sure you mean it all kindly, but—I would rather—"

"Hardly supposed you would—knew one woman who cared for that sort of thing much—she was nursing for me during the war—had a hair lip and an eye like a dagger—good nurse though—rather, have your kind round me—ever nurse any? Could get you a dozen jobs in Sheridan—new prospects every night—fifty dollars a week—what do you say?"

"But I'm not seeking work, Doctor," smiling in spite of her bewilderment "I have money enough with me."

"Well, I didn't know—thought maybe you wanted a job, and didn't like to ask for it—have known 'em like that—no harm done—if you ever do want anything like that, just come to me—my name's Fairbairn—everybody knows me here—operated on most of 'em—rest expect to be—Damn that engineer! don't believe he knows whether he's going ahead or heaving up." He peered out of the window, pressing his face hard against the glass. "I reckon that's Sheridan's whistle for now—don't be nervous—I'll see you make the hotel all right."
