SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS

ANY PERSON who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quartersection of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency, or Sub-agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader. Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister. In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties.—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra. A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties.—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00. W. W. CORY, Deputy of the Minister of the Interior. N.B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

FRIGHT IN BATTLE.

How Grant Cured a Badly Scared Staff Officer.

One of General Grant's newly appointed staff officers had never been in any serious engagement. But almost the first day that he reported to Grant he was placed under a fire of the hottest and most severe kind. The screaming of the balls, the roaring of the cannon and the sharp crack and rattle of the musketry thoroughly demoralized him. He became absolutely sick and paralyzed with fear. He was so weak from nervous excitement that he lost physical control over himself. General Grant came up at the very climax of his fright, and, noticing his pale face, his blue lips and chattering teeth, he said: "Captain, you are frightened. That is natural enough. You will get over it. Suppose," continued Grant, "I should come to you with a hat containing ninety-nine white beans and one black one and I should ask you to thrust your hand into the hat at a venture and pick out the black bean. Do you think your chance of getting that black bean would be very good? Well, your chance for being hit under this fire is no greater than your chance for drawing the black bean." This officer at once took heart, and from then on he never showed the slightest sign of fear.—Life.

A DYED BEARD.

It Probably Changed the History of the Whole Human Race. The most striking case in history of the importance of trifles is furnished by the story of Musa, the leader of the Moslem host which won from Christendom in three and a half years dominions which it took the soldiers of the cross twenty generations to win back. He had a red beard. This was a trifle. Musa, though a very great general, was a very vain man, and he dyed his beard black. This was another trifle. One of his captains chafed him on the subject, and Musa forthwith had him stripped and scourged. For this, at the very height of his conquering career, Musa was recalled by the caliph and disgraced. This made it impossible for him to command the Moslem army at the battle of Tours, on the issue of which, as all historians agree, the destinies of Europe and perhaps of the whole human race depended. It is almost certain that if the genius of Musa had replaced the incompetence of the half dozen tribal leaders whose dissensions made victory impossible the forces of Islam would have joined hands from the west to the east and inclosed Europe in their grasp.—London Standard.

Animals That Are Always Enemies.

Many animals are born with an inherent antipathy for other animals. The excessive fear shown by young rabbits which for the first time smell a ferret and of young turkeys which hear the shrill cry of a hawk they have never heard or seen before are proved examples of the strength of these instinctive antipathies. But the case of the weasel and rat is, perhaps, more to be noticed because of the greater equality of the antagonists. The feud is so bitter that a meeting between them almost certainly means death to one or both. Friendships are not uncommon between the cat and dog and have been known between a dog and wolf, but the mutual attitude of the weasel and rat is invariably war-war that is waged to the death.

Great in His Line.

Robert Barr once showed a portrait of Mark Twain to a silk merchant of Lyons. "Tell me what that is," Mr. Barr said. The merchant gazed at the portrait and answered, "I should say he was a statesman." "Supposing you were wrong in that, what would be your next guess?" asked Mr. Barr. "If he is not a maker of history he is perhaps a writer of it—a great historian, probably. Of course it is impossible for me to guess accurately except by accident, but I use the adjective 'great' because I am convinced this man is great in his line, whatever it is. If he makes silk he makes the best." Mr. Barr told the French merchant who the portrait represented and said, "You have summed him up in your last sentence."—London News.

Gladstone and Grillon's.

Mr. Gladstone's election to Grillon's club, which took place in 1840, was far from delightful him at the time. He declared it to be "a thing quite alien to my temperament, which requires more soothing and domestic appliances after the feverish and consuming excitement of party life, but the rules of society oblige me to submit." Lord Morley adds: "As it happened, so narrow is man's foreknowledge Grillon's down to the very end of his life nearly sixty years ahead, had no more faithful or congenial member."—London Chronicle.

Soon Remedied.

Irate Householder—Why can't you answer this bell sooner? The fire's out again! Where have you been? Maid of all work (resigned and leaving)—I've been packin' up my things. I can't stop to do that. It'll light itself soon. The 'ouse is afire!—London Punch.

His Reception.

Young Man—I have called, sir, to request the hand of your daughter in marriage. Old Grumleigh—Has she accepted you? Young Man—Yes, sir. Old Grumleigh—Then what do you want to come round and bother me with your troubles for?

QUARRYS FOR ICE.

Quarrying glaciers for ice is becoming an important industry in Switzerland wherever one can be connected by chutes with some place having good transportation facilities. The ice is blasted out of the glaciers with black powder and the blocks stored for a time in icehouses until the frost which covers them has been removed. They are then sent down the mountain sides on chutes, curved here and there to lessen the great velocity. Ice quarrying is not unknown in this country. Crook county, Oregon, especially the southern portion, is pretty far removed from the traditional idea of Paradise, although irrigation in recent years has done something to render it more habitable. The region is of volcanic origin and a great lava bed bounds one portion of it, from beneath which comes the sound of rushing waters, but inaccessible water. In this almost desolate region one can almost imagine what a godsend a lump of ice would be. And there it is, close at hand, hidden away in a cave. The entrance to this cave, which is at least fifteen miles from any water, is about 4000 feet above the level of the sea. This entrance is small. From it you go down a declivity of some fifty feet, when you reach a chamber with a floor of ice. From there you pass through a narrow entrance into an inner chamber which contains an inexhaustible supply of ice. A block is quarried out and within three hours the cavity is filled with water which is soon turned into solid ice. Geologists are puzzled over an explanation of this extraordinary phenomenon. The best offered so far seems to be that the water trickles through the volcanic rock from the Deschutes river, which takes a remarkably winding course at an elevation much higher than that of the cave. But even more remarkable is it that ice should be quarried on the sides of the famous Sicilian volcano, Mount Etna. Etna is 10,840 feet high, and during the 10,840 feet high, and during the winter is snow capped. Whenever an eruption occurs the fragments of rock and ashes thrown out of the crater spread over the snow, which is compressed by the weight and so forms ice. Just as the sawdust used in icehouses protects the ice, so does the dust from the volcano form a non-conductor of heat for the compressed snow on Mount Etna. These deposits of ice have been formed for untold centuries and now and then they are exposed through an earthquake or the sliding down of a mass of volcanic matter. On these occasions if the labor is not too great the lazy Sicilian will pick out a few blocks of ice and sell them in Catania or Taormina.
