I. O. F. AMENDMENTS.

The Supreme Court of the Independent Order of Foresters has given notice of application to the Dominion Parliament for legislation amending its act of incorporation, defining investment powers of the society, providing an investment board, creating a fraternal fund and a department for the relief of its members and dependents, and defining the rights of members of the society in the accumulated funds.

As Far as He Had Traced it. "Can you tell me where this road leads to?" asked the man in the automobile. "No," replied the farmer. "I understand you can reach Chicago by following it, but I couldn't tell you where it goes to after that."-Chicago Record-Herald.

THE UP TO DATE FARMER.

He Was Ready For the Bond Salesman From the Metropolis.

"THE farmer is the one who is making the progress," recently remarked a bond salesman for one of the big houses, just in from the road. "I've got them to let me try eastern Kansas this trip--new territory for us. I'd heard that the tillers of the soil down there were all buying automobiles and things, and that they were a progressive lot. I found them that, and then some. Here's what happened to me in a little town up near the northeast corner of the state.

"One morning I drove about four miles out into the country to try to sell some bonds to an old farmer named Pratt who was reported to have a pot of money. The old man seemed to be thoroughly posted on the bond market--knew all about the latest offerings, etc. He seemed to like my issue, but said he was 'hung up' with ten Wabash fours, and that until he got rid of them he couldn't buy anything else. We were doing quite a little in Wabash fours at the time, and I offered to take them off his hands at 66--just before leaving the hotel I had had a wire stating that they were 66 1/2 bid on the exchange.

"The old man hesitated, but finally agreed to make the exchange. He was to take seven of my bonds at a little less than par and I was to take his ten Wabash fours at 66 1/2. I fancied I saw a twinkle in his eye as I wrote down the figures.

"The deal closed, he offered to show me the house. We went upstairs and, in what he called his 'office,' what was my amazement to find a stock ticker buzzing busily away. I walked over to the machine and pulled some of the tape out of the basket. A string of quotations caught my eye. It read something like this: Wabash fours, 10 at 67, 5 at 66, 15 at 64 1/2, 50 at 62."--Puck.

Untold.

The sandy haired little man was quite a joker.

He said to the boys in the lobby the other night: "I've got the best story you ever heard on the male suffragette. It's a scream."

"Go ahead an' tell it, Pinky," said one of the listeners.

"All right," the sandy haired man responded; then he chuckled and looked around. "Maybe I'd better ask first if there's any male suffragette in the party."

A big man with thick shoulders, a heavy lower jaw and large, knotted hands crowded a little closer.

"I'm one of 'em," he said. "Let's hear the story."

But just at that moment Pinky fancied he saw a friend over near the big doors and hurried away.

And the scream remains untold--Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Soft Answer.

John P. Irish spoke in California against woman suffrage. One night after a meeting in Sacramento a militant suffragette came up to him and said in stern, cruel tones:

"John P. Irish, you're a lowdown liar! The truth isn't in you!"

"Madam," Irish rejoined, "is it so bad as that? Wouldn't you believe anything I say?"

"Not a thing. I wouldn't believe a word you utter. You can't tell the truth!"

"In that case," replied Irish, "permit me to say, madam, that you are a perfect lady."--Saturday Evening Post.

PROGRESS IN AVIATION.

The Hydroaeroplane So Far Seems to Be a Safe Craft.

The hydroaeroplane is operated both in the water and in the air exactly like an aeroplane. The craft, driven by the propeller, travels over the surface of the water until it has gained sufficient speed; then the elevating plane is tilted upward by a simple motion of the controlling lever, and the air pressure against the upward tilted planes lifts the machine out of the water.

When the desired altitude is reached the elevating plane is brought to a level and the machine travels horizontally. To descend, the elevating plane is tilted downward until the floats are about to touch the water, then upward a little to break the impact, and the craft is then gliding on the surface of the water like a hydroplane.

If this is done properly there is no shock, and the passengers know that they are again travelling on the water only because the speed is about ten miles per hour less and the water sprays at the head of the hull.

The advantages afforded by the hydroaeroplane over the aeroplane proper are many. First of all, it affords much more safety and thus removes the greatest objection against the aeroplane. In the fourteen months since Glenn H. Curtiss made the first successful flight with the hydroaeroplane there has not been a serious accident, yet it has been used most generally.--Henry Woodhouse in Metropolitan Magazine.

ITALY HAS LOTS OF MONEY.

Her War With Turkey Hasn't Bothered Her a Bit Financially.

An illustration of the hitherto unsuspected prosperity of Italy is the fact that she has not had to borrow a cent of foreign money for the expense of her war with Turkey. This war had cost Italy up to May 11 $47,880,000, or just $210,000 a day since it began on Sept. 27, 1911. Nevertheless her 3 1/2 per cent government bonds are quoted in the markets of Europe between 97 and 98, varying, of course, from day to day.

Bonaldo Stringher, director general of the Bank of Italy, has just made an official report stating that Italian emigrants send at least $90,000,000 a year back home, while tourists spend almost if not quite as much in Italy. Either one of these sources of wealth would more than suffice to pay the entire expenses of the war.

Money is so abundant in Italy that when popular subscriptions were opened in many cities for military aeroplanes to be presented to the government the lists were filled in a few days, the total amount of the subscriptions far exceeding those of a similar nature in France, in spite of the wave of popular enthusiasm for aeroplaning in the latter country.

It is worthy of note that this war has cost Italy in human lives only 53 officers and 549 men, according to the official figures, an unprecedentedly small loss for eight months of active warfare.--Exchange.

Aviation Dinners.

A French contemporary thinks that aviation will play an important part in dinners such as those organized by the Ligue des Gourmets. With the help of their aeroplanes guests will taste each dish in that place where it is at its best and yet finish their dinner within a reasonable time. They will fly to Marseilles for a plate of bouillabaisse and remain there for a red mullet; then to Bourg for a plump young chicken and to Toulouse for a dish of green peas; across to London for a slice of roast beef and back to Valognes for a salad such as can only be found in Normandy. A peach at Montreuil and a slice of Gruyere at Emmenthal will conclude a meal perfect in every direction.--London Chronicle.

Now He's a Door Opener.

Rouley Onibero, brother of the once formidable sultan of Belanzin of Dahomey, who was dethroned and whose country was annexed by the French, has become so reduced in circumstances that he has taken the position of chasseur at a Montmartre restaurant, where he opens the doors of motorears for financiers, deputies and other fashionable pleasure seekers until the small hours of the morning. He long served under the French colors, taking part in twenty-eight campaigns, was thrice wounded and has been decorated for bravery on the field. He draws a veteran's pension of $15 a month.

Blue Blood.

Two queens of England had a "barmaid" for grandmother. The story runs thus: A Westminster barmaid married her master, a publican. After his death she found a second husband in Mr. Hyde, a lawyer, who in later years became lord chancellor and Earl of Clarendon. A daughter of this union married the Duke of York and was the mother of Mary and Anne, queens of England.--London Tit-Bits.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson VII.--Fourth Quarter, For Nov. 17, 1912.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Mark viii, 27, to ix, 1--Memory Verses, 36, 37--Golden Text, Matt. xvi, 16--Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This lesson is recorded also in Matt. xvi and Luke ix, and we will consider it with the harmony of the gospels before us. Mimpriss in his harmony says that this is the first particular prediction concerning the rejection, the death and the resurrection of the Christ and was probably apart from the multitude and is the first key opposed to the leaven of the Pharisees. Matthew and Mark say that He had come into the coasts or towns of Caesarea Philippi, and Luke adds that He was alone praying, His disciples being with Him. We shall see in the next lesson that He was praying also at the time of His transfiguration (Luke ix, 18, 29). Luke records other instances of His praying in chapters iii, 21; vi, 12; xi, 1; xxii, 41; xxiii, 34. He ever talked with His Father in heaven with the same realization of His presence as that of the people about Him.

People talked about Him and had their opinions as they have today. The Pharisees who believed in a resurrection thought that He might be John the Baptist or Elijah or Jeremiah or one of the prophets, at which, no doubt, the Sadducees scoffed, for they did not believe in resurrection or spirit, but the Pharisees confessed both (Acts xxiii, 8). His next question is the one that should lay hold of our hearts, "Whom say ye that I am?" or as He put it to the Pharisees at another time, "What think ye of Christ?" (Matt. xxii, 42.)

It should not so much concern me what others say, but what does my heart say, what is He to me personally? Simon Peter, generally the spokesman, answered, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God" (verse 29; Matt. xvi, 16). See his similar testimony in John vi, 69, and that of Martha in John xi, 27. Can I look upon Him with His eyes as a flame of fire searching me through and through and say, O Lord, thou art to me the risen living Christ, my personal Saviour. If so, then blessed am I, for our Father in heaven has taught me by His spirit (Matt. xvi, 17). The words translated Peter and rock in Matt. xvi, 18, are not quite the same, the first signifying a piece of rock easily moved and the other a solid rock immovable. The rock foundation is the great truth that Jesus is God, and other foundation can no man lay (1 Cor. iii, 11; Acts iv, 12).

The church built on this and on His great atonement as God can never be moved. The company of all true believers in Him constitutes this church, and all else must come to naught. Peter was given the keys of the kingdom, not the church, and the church is not the kingdom, but the heavenly center of it. From that time and repeatedly He began to tell them that at the hands of the elders, chief priests and scribes He must suffer many things, be rejected and killed and after three days rise again (verses 31; ix, 31; x, 33, 34); but, although to us seemingly so plain, His disciples did not receive these sayings, not even Peter and John, and it is written concerning them that up to the time of His actual resurrection from the dead they knew not the Scripture that He must rise again from the dead (John xx, 9). They had not received the message of the prophets that the Messiah must suffer, die, be buried and rise again, though we can see it plainly in such passages as Ps. xxii; Isa. liii; Dan. ix, 26; Zech. xii, 10; xiii, 6, 7. Peter therefore said that He should not speak of suffering: "Be it far from Thee, Lord. This shall not be unto Thee." "Pity thyself" (Matt. xvi, 22, and margin). Mark our Lord's reply and note that what is not of God is of the devil and is an offense to God.

Believers are either a sweet savor of Christ or salt that has lost its savor. There is no room for self in a disciple of Christ. It must be always a denial of self, taking up the cross daily and following Him; always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake, that the life of Jesus may be manifest in us; reckoning ourselves dead unto sin and alive unto God (II Cor. iv, 10, 11; Rom. vi, 11). There is no cross of gold or jet or jewels or flowers seen in Scripture, but only a cruel cross of death.

It means crucifixion to the world and the world to us, seeing Jesus only. To one life means business, to another his profession, to another pleasure, to another this or that great scheme, philanthropic perhaps, or just to make money, but one who is right with God says, "To me to live is Christ." He does not ask us to suffer with Him without setting before us the glory of the kingdom to which He has called (I Thess. ii, 12; II Thess. ii, 14; I Pet. v, 10, and to which He refers in verses 38 of our lesson, and which we shall see more clearly in next week's study of the transfiguration, and to which the last verse of this lesson (Mark ix, 1) clearly belongs. It was the God of glory who appeared to Abraham (Acts xvii, 2), and we can only be sustained in the patient waiting, as He and others were. But the church as a whole is as blind to the glory of His kingdom as the disciples were to His death and resurrection, not because it is not plainly revealed, but because other thoughts and ways leave no room for His.

ARMY REJECTS "RUBBER MAN."

A real live rubber man caused a sensation recently in the recruiting station at Louisville, Kentucky. His application for enlistment in the army was rejected because his height could not be determined. Ten times the recruit was measured and each time a different result was obtained. It varied from 68 to 72 inches. Capt. Shelton and the men of the corps present at the physical examination were unable to believe their own eyes. Other men of the squad were called in and took a hand in the measurement, but their efforts were of no avail. All stood aghast. Capt. Shelton shook his head. "We will have to reject this man. I can't do otherwise in this case," he said.
