are acquiring herds of utility cattle. The raising of hogs and sheep on the big grain farms of Southern Alberta, is becoming a big adjunct to farming, and the ranchers are paying more importance to the raising of ewes for breeding purposes than formerly. A marked improvement in the condition of hogs and sheep placed on the market is also noted.

FREAK OF NATURE.

Ingersoll, Jan. 12.-A freak nature, in the shape of a calf with two heads, was born on the farm of Mr. A. Hughes, Dereham, yesterday. Both heads were fully matured, and the calf was otherwise normal. The extra head was fastened on to the side of the shoulder, and that it was important in maintaining life was evident from the manner in which the calf breathed, as was explained by the veterinary in attendance The calf, however, died at the time of birth.

THREE FIRES IN ONE WEEK AT SHELBURNE.

Shelburne has had two fires during the past week, both of them luckily being got under control before much damage was done. The first took place in the C. P. R yards Saturday afternoon, when a potato car, loaded by S. F. M. O' Flynn & Son, and standing on siding waiting to be taken away by a freight train then due, took fire in some way from the oil heaters. There was great excitement for a while, and the potatoes had to be unloaded, but the flames were extinguished before they burned their way to the outside of the car. FOX BREEDERS.

Myomins, Ont., Is Home of Canada's Second Oldest Farm.

Widesprend interest has been taken Mr. Gordon Bowler, of Cheeser- in the black-fox farming industry of Prince Edward Island and as a result that interesting venture has come to La identified almost solely with the island province. It is forgotten that Ontario possesses what is with one exception the oldest farm of the sort in America, and has for some years been an active centre of the business.

Of these the most extensive is that conducted at Wyoming, Ont., by T. L. Bowerman. He is the man who cleared $10,000 in the past season on foxes alone. He does not raise the ordinary red fox, whose fur is as yet in this part of the world comparatively plentiful. Only the "silver grays, whose fur is so expensive that only the very wealthy can afford it, are to be found on this Wyoming farm. The story of his success is best told by Mr. Bowerman himself, and contains, in general, the experiences of the oth-

"Twelve years ago," he states. "while in business as a fur dealer, I saw the possibilities of profit in raising fur-bearing animals. At great expense I secured a pair of silver gray foxes which had been dug out cf their results and in these years I had to While the beef cattle industry is withstand the jeers of my farm neighgrowing rapidly, the most notable bors who regarded the scheme as nofeature is the interest which farm- thing less than made. For I must ers of Alberta are taking in confess that at that time the enterdairying, according to Mr. Stevens. prise did look a failure. But I found Aided by the efforts of the Pro- that my trouble had been in putting vincial Government, the farmers too many foxes together. I used to put two pairs in the same pen, until I discovered that the females are very jealous of each other and if placed together will destroy their y ...ng. For, in order to conceal the puppies, the mother fox will bury them in the ground. This, of course, is done with the best of intentions, but always results in suffocation. The change in method '-ought results remarkably soon. During the first year I tried putting each pair by themselves. I secured nine puppies, and since then I have found little difficulty but much experience in raising them. I keep the foxes in pens about 60 feet long and 20 feet wide, which are fenced off with poultry netting and this extends four feet under ground to prevent them escaping by burrowing. The "houses" are built of concrete and designed to resemble as much as possible the natural burrows.

In the fall the foxes mate and in 52 days each female will give birth to from four to nine puppies about as large as kittens. And an important factor from a commercial point of view is that in one year these puppies are mature. At the beginning of the winter I buy an old horse, the flesh of which furnishes food for the stock through the whole winter. I Guelph, Jan. 9.—One thousand have increased the size of my pens

The pelts are marketed in London, Eng. For a single fox Mr. Bowerman sometimes secures as much as $2,000 and for a pair to be used for breeding purposes he is paid from $4,000 to $5,000. For the past few years most poultry class, and 40 studying of the foxes of the farm have not been killed for their fur, for, now that the business has been proven a success, many others are anxious to start farms and he finds a ready market for breeding pairs. The animals are killed by chloroform in order that the skins may not be injured.

The remarkable value of a silver fox palities in their district of an in- fur lies in the fact that it cannot be crease in the price of municipal imitated. The color is black, save at printing. Prices are also raised to the tip of the tail, while around the Fair Associations. Their prices hips is found the silver-gray band which gives the fur its value. At the Financial Statements and Audit- root and tip the hairs are black but ors' Reports, 200 copies, $1.75 a gray through the middle. Thus is Another farm of note is that of Samuel Lucas, also situated at Wyoming. In addition, a number of farmers in the Canadian west are experimenting and as other fur-bearing animals may raised on the same farm as foxes the comparatively new enterprise looks to have a future of great promise. The depletion of the wild fur supply may yet prove a boon to many.
