Lesson XI.—Second Quarter, For June 15. 1913.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Gen. xivii, 1-12. Memory Verses, 8-10-Golden Text, Rom. viii, 28-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns,

This is the only lesson assigned in "Jacob before Pharaoh," the lesson title, we must consider as many as possible of many most important while to notice when Jacob is so called tive guarantee to do all that and when he is called Israel, the old claimed for it, or money back. name and the new, remembering the cents when and wherefore of the change. Being convinced by the sight of the wagons that Joseph still lived. he started on his journey to Egypt and at

Joseph, being thus advised of his father's arrival at Goshen, went in his chariot to meet his father and presented himself unto him (xlvi, 29), and who can tell what is so briefly summed up in the words, "He fell on his neck and wept on his neck a good while?" What a meeting it must have been after twenty-two years of separation, and Joseph all that time supposed by his father to be dead! Now he receives him back from the dead and finds him ruler over all Egypt and a savior of multitudes in all lands as well as of himself and his household. What a day it will be when the nation of Israel shall look upon Him whom they crucified and find in Him not only their own Messiah, but the one who will bring salvation to all nations! for "when Christ, our life, shall ap- the buggy strike the spirited learn he has become the lucky sucpear, then shall we also appear with Him in glory" (Col. iii, 4).

It seems to me that there are just two prominent things in the lesson verses of today-Pharaoh bestowing the best of all the land of Egypt upon Joseph's father and brethren and Ja log was bumped, when he was running the mail. cob's reply to the question of Pharaoh, "How old art thou?" (Verses 6, 9, 11.) Because of the death and resurrection of the Lord Jesus all who truly receive Him and thus become His brethren are blessed with all things in Him, and on going back found Mr. Gray in known Tara boy, which took place believing this makes us strangers and a semi-conscious state. They took at Galt on Wednesday. He was pilgrims here and fills us with a sense him home, and the Dr. reports a painter by trade and was boardof our own unworthiness (I Pet. So Joseph nourished his father and his brethren and all their households during all the remaining years of famine (verse 12), and Jacob lived in the land of Egypt seventeen years. Jacob therefore had Joseph with him the first and last seventeen years, the first seventeen of Joseph's life and the last seventeen of Jacob's life (xxxvii, 2; xlvii, 28). It is worth while to consider the seven weepings of Joseph, but I think the last is in some respects the most touching. He had nourished his brethren and their families for seventeen years, having fully assured them of his forgiveness at the beginning of that period, but now, their father being dead, they say "he will certainly requite us all the evil which we did unto him." So they send a messenger asking him to forgive their trespass and their sin and the evil which they did unto him (1, 15-17).

Joseph wept when they spake unto him. Was there ever anything so mean and contemptible as such conduct? Yet see his most Christlike words in I, 19-

21. He reassured them and comfort-P.M. P.M. ed them and spake kindly unto them. 3.15 625 Lv. "The stone of Israel" carries us on to Isa. xxviii. 16; Ps. cxviii. 22; Matt. xxi, 42; Eph. ii, 20; 1 Pet. ii, 6-8; Dan. II. 35, 45 "Separate from his brethren' is repeated in the farewell blessings of Moses (Deut. xxxiii, 16) and wondrously links Joseph with Christ. "A fruitful bough by a well whose branches run over the wall" makes us think of Jesus and the Samaritan woman at Jacob's well and all that it suggests. The last words in Genesis, "a coffin in Egypt," and the story of that coffin (Ex xiii, 19: Josh. xxiv. 32: Heb. xi, 22) teach the vic tory of faith.
