DURHAM, JULY 17, 1913.

THE NORTH GREY ELECTION

The bye-election in North Grey on Monday last added C. S. Cameron to the Conservative side of the Ontario Legislature. Since the general election in November, 1911 six bye-elections have been held...

"I think John's love is cooling," said the bride.

"What makes you think so?" "The other night he suggested that he'd like to go to lodge occasionally, and we haven't been married a year yet."—Detroit Free Press.

She makes all the trouble we have in this life. And causes our trouble to double; But, be she a maiden or be she a wife, She makes this life worth all the trouble.

"Pa, what's the difference between a statesman and a politician?" "The statesman is the man whose views are similar to your own."

Spring's on her way, Take it from me. Do not delay. The sassafras tea. —Indianapolis Star.

"He said there are no classes in this country." "I guess he never attended night school."

Mary had a little lamb. Observe the tense, we pray, For with the price that prevail It couldn't be today. —New York Press.

"Franklin was a great philosopher." "And so many follow his example." "In what particular?" "He died, didn't he?"

Methuselah'd no microbes in his day. He didn't boil the ice or swat the fly, He was never vaccinated, De-appendixed, fumigated, Yet Methuselah almost forgot to die. —New York Sun.

"Doc's voice seems to have gone back on him." "He has a bad cold." "A horse doctor."

Behold the bug! The bug-a-boo Of a bughouse generation, The bodeful germ That ends life's term In this enlightened nation!

That makes us sick, that makes us sin Or rich or poor or lazy; But, what is worst, We fear, it first Makes every one bug crazy! —Chicago News.

"Is Mamie generous?" "Extremely. She will cheerfully give away anything in the house that doesn't belong to her."

There was an old maid down in Ga. Whose name was Elizabeth Fa. Her face was so plain That it gave you a pain When you saw her map coming Ta. —Detroit Free Press.

"What is your opinion of the high cost of living?" "I can't presume to hold an opinion upon such an exalted subject."

I don't forget my summer girl When ice is on the lakes and ponds, When skating dancels form a whirl Of gay brunettes and dippy blonds.

I don't forget my summer girl When sleds go whizzing down the hill, When sportive lassies snowballs hurt With much more merriment than skill.

No skating lass with flying curls, No sleighing miss, no coasting belle, Makes me forget my summer girl— She is my winter girl as well. —Pittsburgh Post.

"Why didn't you tell Brown he lied when he made that statement?" "He was nearer to me than I was to the street car."

There was a young lady—and wasn't it quaint— She laid out a dollar on powder and paint, With a pencil of bismuth her eyebrows to trace, And all for the purpose of making a face! —St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"Pa, what is a happy medium?" "A happy medium is one who has just had a sitting with an old guy who hasn't anything but money."

Sisters, ere crass politics Your fine art engages, Shall we sapient statesmen fix Woman's legal wages?

Aye, we'll make the hire higher, You need not exhort us, Then we'll tire and retire, And you may support us! —Chicago News.

"Who is that fellow?" "They call him the bobo poet." "But he doesn't look like a bobo." "Nor does he write like a poet."

He hunted trouble, and he picked A victim, now he's shattered, He started in to contradict A little man who stuttered. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

"Why is the fat man in the dumps?" "Always doing the wrong thing." "What has he done now?" "Gave the bearded lady a razor for a birthday present."

Said Ned to Tom, "I'd like to wed, For two are one and people marry, 'I know,' said Tom, 'look here, Ned, There may be one more to carry.'" —Judge.

"Pa, how often does the moon get full?" "About once a month." "About once a month?" "That's the moon's moon a joy ride."

To buy her present she spent. And her words were sweeter Than honey. But when he kissed her she said: "I'm married to money."
