

WON BY MOONLIGHT

Moon Beams That Made Path to Heaven.

By ORA ANICE EASTMAN.

The strains of the waltz reached them as they sat in the shadow of the great veranda, with the June moon reflected on the water, with youth in their hearts and the music of life in their veins.

"I'm Not Brilliant, Amy, and Haven't Much Beside My Money."

more they were alone, and they could hear their own breathing. Suddenly Tom awoke to the fact that the others were dancing and once more he asked, "Want to try it?"

step were dying; in a moment the veranda would be invaded. "Tell me, Amy; quick!" he pleaded, trying gently to bring her face around so that he could look into her eyes.
