THE CALL TO BUSINESS

The commercial interests of Canada have so far been more disturbed than farming from enlistment. Business firms are calling for assistance from the younger men and from the women who must train for positions in Banks and Business offices. The demand is keener than ever before and good positions are easily obtained by those who are qualified especially as Stenographers.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson VIII.—First Quarter, For Feb. 20, 1916.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts iv, 32, to v, 5. Memory Verses, 34, 35—Golden Text, I Pet. i, 22—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The topic of today's lesson is "The Christian Brotherhood at Jerusalem," but as half of the portion assigned tells of the failure of that brotherhood in the case of Ananias, and we have no further study in chapter v, the remainder of the chapter being very important, it would seem wise to devote most of our time to the further testimony of Peter and its results.

The one heart and soul of the believers and the common fund from which all were helped was certainly a beautiful brotherhood, but the deceit of Ananias and the murmuring of the Grecians rather spoiled the harmony. The self life which remains in the believer and the deceit and wickedness of every human heart makes it next to impossible for even the smallest company of Christians to be of one mind very long about anything. If all could be fully yielded and have no will but His, no self pleasing and no pride or ambition it might be possible. Because of human frailty I cannot use the "with one accord" in our prayer service, but invariably omit it.

While Barnabas, the son of consolation, sold his land and laid the proceeds at the apostle's feet, it would seem that his sister Mary, the mother of John Mark, kept her home and had the believers meet there for fellowship and prayer (Acts xii, 12; Col. iv, 10). We must not follow others in what they do, but each for himself say, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

Ananias and Sapphira did not need to sell their property because others did it, and when sold they did not need to bring all the proceeds. Their sin was in their professing to give all, but keeping back a part, and thus lying to the Holy Spirit. God is the God of Truth, the Spirit is the Spirit of Truth, and Jesus Christ is the Truth. They desire truth in the inward parts (Ps. li, 6), and ought else is a grief to them. If all deceivers and liars were dealt with as these two were, what a lot of funerals there would be and what a thinning out of church members!

It surely becomes us all to pray the prayer of Ps. cxxxix, 23, 24, and to aim at nothing less than an honest, whole hearted surrender to Him who has bought us with such a great price. In verses 12-16 of our lesson chapter (chapter v) we see the risen Christ showing Himself alive by signs and wonders and healings through these human channels, and multitudes of men and women believed and were added to the Lord (verse 14). It does not count for anything to be added to a list of church members unless truly added to the Lord. He said, "Every plant which my Heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up" (Matt. xv, 13). The power of God so stirred the adversary that his followers were filled with indignation and laid hands on the apostles and put them in the common prison (verses 17, 18). The Lord in Heaven was watching over His own and sent a messenger from heaven to open the prison doors, bring the prisoners out and send them to speak in the temple the words of life. When the morning came there were no apostles in the prison, but they were found in the temple teaching the people, and the high priest and council and senate being assembled, the officers found them and brought them and set them before the council. Now, for the second time, Peter has the privilege of honoring Jesus Christ before this august assembly. The high priest asked how it was that when forbidden to teach in the name of Jesus Christ they had persisted in doing so and had filled the city of Jerusalem with their doctrine. That was a good testimony to the zeal of the apostles in their devotion to the Lord, for it would be difficult today to find a city filled with their doctrine. It sounds strange to hear him say that the apostles intended to bring the blood of Jesus upon them (verse 28) when they themselves had said to Pilate, "His blood be upon us, and upon our children" (Matt. xxvii, 25).

Peter was very clear and decided in accusing them of killing Jesus Christ, and now for the fourth time he repeats it (Acts ii, 23, 24; iii, 14, 15; iv, 10; v, 30, 31) and more often asserts the fact of His resurrection. As to obedience, there is only one to obey—"We ought to obey God rather than men." As in the case of Daniel's friends, there was no room for argument, but simply a matter of right or wrong, and the wrong they would not do. Peter did not hesitate to declare that the risen and exalted Prince and Saviour would give even to them repentance and forgiveness of sins if they desired it and said that the Holy Spirit stood with them in this testimony (verses 31, 32).

Peter's testimony so angered them that they were ready to kill the apostles, but the counsel of Gamaliel saved the situation, and after beating the apostles and repeating the command not to speak in the name of Jesus they let them go. They went forth rejoicing to be counted worthy to suffer shame for His sake, and daily in the temple and from house to house they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ (41, 42). This is the fearlessness and devotion we all need.

A Belgian's Praise of Canada

A most interesting "Book of Belgium's Gratitude," expresses the thanks of distinguished Belgian writers and artists to the British Empire and to the United States for their help and hospitality in the war.

The literary contributions are translated by distinguished English people. Thirty-three pictures by Belgian artists adorn the book.

Here we quote from three of these articles. Emile Verhaeren praises our British skies, and the translation is made by Lord Latymer:—

"I think that nowhere in the world are the clouds so beautiful as those that adorn the British sky. I have seen them in Scotland, in Yorkshire, and in Wales, and they were wonderful. I have lived with them during the melancholy days of winter, and the happy hours of spring, while thinking of my devastated country, where the clouds are clouds of horror, the smoke of bursting shells, and the breaking out of conflagrations. My mournful dreams and my hopes of resistance and victory found their symbols in the everchanging heavens of Great Britain: and my long talks with the luminous travellers moving through them, in which I attributed to them my thoughts, my wishes, and my hopes, made me happy, or at least brought me consolation.

So I can understand why English landscape painters have always been more attracted by the sky than by the earth. On some of Constable's canvasses the ground is only indicated by a simple line as a kind of support to the enormous aerial structure. An assemblage of clouds takes the place of a gathering of rustics, and the whole scene is nothing less than a great portrait of immensity, in which the agents of beauty are in the air, the wind, and the brightness, brilliant and moving. These diffuse an influence both tremendous and delicate.

We can thank the English, then for all the careful and splendid beneficence that they have shown us, without forgetting that the very land itself has been equally generous to us. It has revealed itself to us in all its peculiar beauty in all its individual radiance, to charm and console us. It has done more. It has inspired us with lofty and large thoughts. Whoever looks on its horizon, guarded by its clouds, luminous and warrior-like, feels his heart and spirit strengthened and exalted. A moral force resides in beautiful things. Though silent, they are potent. They counsel and persuade. He who listens to them, and above all, understands them, experiences in their presence a certain great and strong influence that few men inspire or impose. To live with the clouds is to live with a high-minded and great-hearted friend."

A Belgian's Praise of Canada

A Dominican, R. P. Rutten, gives high praise to Canada, and his article is translated by Sir Lees Knowles:—

"Oh, that I were an artist, so that, on the spot, I might make my fellow-countrymen appreciate a fraction of the beauties of the country through which I have just passed! Why am I not a poet, capable of singing a hymn of thanks for all the kindness that has been shown to me here?

Canada, I salute thee, country of lakes, big and little, dotted with islands, small and great, with fancifully indented shores, fringed with luxuriant vegetation; in the autumn a many-colored and brilliant attire.

I love thy vast spaces, thy prairies, rise in gentle slopes up the sides of thy hills and carpet the steeps of thy precipitous chains.

I love thy vast spaces, thy prairies, broad as the ocean; thy fields of corn, waving as far as the eye can reach, like the rolling billows of a mighty sea.

I love thy St. Lawrence, mighty stream, chafing, as it were, in confinement, wherein is marvelously reflected every tint of heaven which I have seen on a fine summer's day, a vast sheet of water shining like an immense blade of steel, glittering in the rays of the sun.

I love the incomparable and beauty of thy Rocky Mountains, their summit in a blaze of light, their mighty rocks, their pointed peaks, their deep ravines, their dreamy lakes and roaring torrents, pouring their waters of transparent green upon a stony bed of white bleached purity. In vain do the pine trees try unceasingly to reach the summit of thy proud pinnacles. Their lines are so fine and their outline so noble that the sun and snow alone can enhance beauty.

Thou art glorious, even in winter, land of Canada, when the snow hides thee completely beneath a cloak of white, not as a shroud, but as a garment, guarding thy slumber, that at thy awakening thy fields, thy forests, and thy prairies may yield once more to the millions who depend upon them, their cattle, their timber, and their corn.

How They Die.

La Comtesse Van Den Steen De Jehay tells "How They Die" and her article is translated by Lady Muriel Bathurst:—

"When you escaped death you like to recall with a touch of pride the moment when he overtook you.

You realize with humility how much your instinctive behaviour was influenced by the mentality, the nationality of those comrades "ante mortem" that Fate gave you.

I have seen the death of Englishmen, of Frenchmen, and of Belgians. I have faced death with Belgians, with Frenchmen, with Englishmen. It is quite another matter.

In French literature the review article, the short story, seem to be but a leading up to the peroration, the final word, satisfying if it is expected, fascinating if it is paradoxical.

Even so, the Frenchman loves to seal his dying hour with a word, a word which sums him up and carries him off with a flourish. Striving unconsciously after effect, his whole soul rises to his white lips in a cry of love, piety or heroic mockery.

On August 15 last year, a handsome Dragoon of the 16th Regiment—Maurice Rolant was his name, and he had been a motor-bus driver in Paris—was conveyed in my ambulance near Dinant, shot through the body by an explosive bullet. Suddenly the inevitable haemorrhage set in. Rolant watched the flowing red tide, and raising himself on his wrists, quivering with enthusiasm, cried out: "Let God take my blood, but may France be victorious!"

So die the sons of France? I believed for a long time—mea culpa—that the Briton's impassiveness was simply a pose. I still think it is a pose, but an hereditary pose, dating from a time when it was considered good manners at Court, to appear indifferent, which, handed down from generation to generation, has become part and parcel of the individual. Somewhat unimaginative, our Ally shows his feelings but little on the surface; perhaps they are all the deeper and more sincere for that.

And what of the Belgians you ask. How do they die?

Others than I will tell you. At the thought of their death throes the pen falls from my fingers. I can only clasp them in a gesture of admiration, of pity, of prayer. Does a mother tell how her little ones have died?"

ALLAN PARK

Mrs. Henry Jones, of Hepworth, was visiting friends in and around the Park lately.

Quite a number of the young folks from around here took in the box social at Lamlash and report a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Park visited at D. Adlam's one evening last week.

Mr. George H. Brigham of Louise, Sundayed with his parents and other friends.

We are very sorry to learn that Mrs. James Hopkins is very ill at present. We hope soon to hear of her speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. William Falkingham of Durham, were visiting friends around this part lately.

We noticed that a number of neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. R. B. Hopkins to pay their respects to his son William, who has enlisted to fight for his country. We extend our best wishes towards him hoping for his safe return.

Quite a number of our young men have enlisted for overseas service and we think that the people should show some tribute of respect by offering something to them in the same way which the north line did to Mr. W. A. Hopkins as we consider they are well worth it.

We understand that quite a number applied for the assessorship for the township but Mr. Moses Jacklin was the lucky man. Mr. Jacklin is an old hand at the job we trust he will be as good in the future.

APPEAL FOR THE HELP OF SUFFERING SERBIA

The Serbian Minister in London has the honor to convey his warmest thanks to all the donors who generously have sent, until now their donations through the Serbian Legation for several Relief Funds, existing in Serbia.

At the same time the Serbian Minister has to announce that several Relief Funds in Serbia are sending through him their appeal to all benevolent men and women, fathers and mothers, and all philanthropic institutions, painting the horrible suffering of the Serbian refugees, the starvation of the population at home in Serbia, the painful scenes of the desperate mothers and frozen children. Many thousands of refugees are dispersed in the villages of Greece, in the Albanian desert or in the rocky hollows of Montenegro, without home, without food! The life of these refugees is now nothing else than a slow dying out. This help will be a real help only if it comes as quickly as possible.

Such appeals have been made from the following funds:—

The Serbian Archbishop of Belgrade's Relief Fund for the families of the fighting men.

The St. Helen's Relief Fund for the orphans, whose fathers were killed in the war.

The Parliamentary Fund for the relief of Serbian refugees.

The Serbian Red Cross Fund for the wounded soldiers.

The generous donors, who wish to help any of the above mentioned funds are kindly requested to send their contributions through the Serbian Legation, 195 Queen's Gate, London S. W.

Please do not forget to mark for which of the Funds the donation is destined, which will be duly acknowledged.
