INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts ix, 1-11, 17-19. Memory Verses, 17, 18-Golden Text, I Tim. i, 15-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The first two verses of our lesson chapter describe Saul going on in the same spirit as when he consented to the murder of Stephen and kept the raiment of those who stoned him. He is still breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the fice in the New Hunter Block. Office Lord (what a horribly bad breath from the pit), and he is indorsed by Israei's high priest, who was professedly God's high priest. The account of his zeal for the devil is written in five different places-in our lesson chapter and in Acts xxii, xxvi; Gal. i and I Tim. i. He confessed that he was a blasphemer and a persecutor; that he was exceedingly mad against the saints, beyond measure persecuting the church of God, shutting up men and women in prison and giving his voice against them when they were put to death and MRADULATE of London. New all the time thought that he was right in thus opposing the teaching and the followers of Jesus of Nazareth. He was, as he afterward said, blinded by dwelling contains all modern ary 15, February 19, March 18, April 15. the god of this world and ignorant of I Tim, i, 14). The day came when he reached the limit, and God's clock struck its "no further" (Job xxxviii, 11). He was not at a preaching service nor under any so called means of grace, but on his way to imprison and kill more saints a light from heaven above the bright- manding to know what steps, ness of the sun which shone upon him, and he heard a voice saying to him in the Hebrew language, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" Pupils may apply and that to touch one of His is as for appointments to Mrs. Mc- touching the apple of His eye! (Eph. 10 22tf v, 30; Zech. ii, 8.) Although Saul's natural eyes were blinded by this great light and he remained three days without sight, he received sight such as he never had before, the eyes of his understanding being enlightened, for the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ had shone in (Eph. i, 18; II Cor. iv, 6). From that hour he was born from above, a child of God, a sinner saved, a rebel surrendered, wholly submitted to Jesus Christ risen from the dead and ascended to heaven. The glory of that light from heaven made him forever blind to all human greatness or righteousness, and now to him to live

was Christ (Acts xxii, 11; Phil. i, 21). With trembling and astonishment he submissively said, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" And thenceforth he was the bondservant of the Lord Jesus Christ. What his communings were those three days without sight or food or drink, and where he went to in Arabia, and his experiences there for three years (Acts ix, 9; Gal. i, 15-19) we may perhaps learn from his own lips some day, but this we may be sure of-there was no one worth while to him but Jesus Christ. How wonderful houses, one on Countess street are the words of the Lord to Ananias concerning him, "He is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name, * * * for I dens and stables; rent reason- will shew him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake" (verses 15, 16). Compare chapter xxii, 14-16; xxvi, 16-18, and get a better grasp of his full commission. Take to your own hearts, O fellow believer, that these things were writfor the Master's use, prepared unto emery good work (II Tim. ii, 21). The Lord had shown Saul, in a vision, during his blindness, a man named Anon him that he might receive his sight erally fulfilled it, putting his hands on him and saying, "Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me that thou mightest receive thy sight and be filled with the Holy Ghost." At once he received sight, something like scales falling from his eyes. He arose and was baptized, refor their generosity and goodness He soon began to realize something of during the recent piano contest. the persecution he had made others Were it not for their unswerving feel. The State of the Navy ONE HUNDRED YOUNG WOMEN

Navy, owing to want of foresight in this or that direction, or owing to a lack of draving force in the Board of Admiralty, was not in so positive a position of superiority as had been supposed. Some naval "experts." who may, we think, acquitted of any desire Wantonly to undermine confidence in Navy, seem to have been injected by the disease of 'cold reet.' Thus those wno never before were inclined to waver in their trus. in the Board of Admiralty, have been tempted, or at all events invited | recently to wonder whether all was going well. something more than vague misgivings has been disseminated-not widely, it is true, but in a rather jurid form. One them was the Hindenburg. ' Se non e vero e ben trovato!' was therefore time that the bogies were knocked over the head, and this extremely useful and salutary act was performed by Mr. Ballour in his admirable speeches of Tuesday and Wednesday in the House of Commons. He did not boast: ne did not pretend that surprises are impossible: but he did offer an account of his stewardship which ought to convince and reassure every man who can keep his mind free from pame. We have read great many speeches on the Navy. we have never read speeches which seemed to us to be in a his devices, and it was an exceeding brighter spirit than those of Mr. abundant grace that had mercy on Baltour. They contained an explicit him and saved him (II Cor. ii, 11; iv, 4; guarantee that everything is being done which an intelligent wideawake and energetic Board ought to do. More than that we cannot

Le To Saul's question, "Who art Thou, Ls quote Mr. Balfour's words as t

Therefore I repeat again that I will make no boast apout the British Admiralty. I will not guarantee it against misfortunes or accidents. But I say in perfect confidence that it is stronger in the face of any overt attack which it is likely to meet, that it is far stronger than it was at the ginning of the war, and is, I believe, stronger than it has ever been in its history."

In only one respect is the Navv

gan. The armored crusers lost have not been replaced. Nevertheless our superiority in this branch over the German Navy is still enormous and is not contested. Mr. Balfour stated that in all our warlike stores, and in naval guns and ammunition, our strength was ten for us and that we, too, may be much greater than at the beginvessels unto honor, sanctified and meet ning of the war relatively to the number of ships in existence, and that it was still continually creasing. The chief anxiety to the Admiralty was the question of labor. When Colonel Winston Churchill was at the Admiralty skilled laborers were allowed to go to the front. Mr. Balfour said that the remedy for the defect was three-fold; to recall skilled laborers who would be more useful at home than abroad, to dilute skilled labor further skilled, and to induce the laborers to turn out more in the time. Another very interesting point was his answer to the rumor that vards were not being used to the my many friends in Durham and ceived meat and was strengthened and best purpose. We have all heard of surrounding country, and also in preached Christ in the synagogues that the contractor who remarks, "It is the west and other distant parts, He is the Son of God (verses 17-20). all very well for the Admiralty to say they are building ships as fast as they can, but here is a slip in my yard standing idle. What have they got to say to that?" Mr. Balfour's answer is that he has investigated many such cases, and they are all capable of the same explanation. The contractor means either that he can produce more preaching boldly at Damascus in the ships if he is given more labor, or that he can produce more ships if only the Admiralty will give him the particular orders which at the moment he can carry out. But it is, of course, the business of the Admiralty to get exactly the ships they want, not to order what they do not need at a particular time. And as for the labor, the Admiralty would naturally supply it if they had it. The contractor's complaint merely brings us back to the notorious labor question. Yet there are many doubting souls who misjudge the Admiralty for no better reason than that they have been told by a friend who knows a contractor, and who was told by the contractor himself, so that there could be no mistake about the matter, &c., &c.

We have intentionally not dealt in this article with Mr. Balfour's crushing rejoinder to Col. Churchill so far as it was a personal indictment. But one part is so germane to our subject of the state of the Navy that it must be mentioned. The charge that the Government were not sufficiently pressing on the construction of Dreadnoughts was actually made ships, light crusers, destroyers by Col. Churchill, who had himself delayed the fitting out of nev kind of ship available in modern Dreadnoughts by taking awa their guns for monitors. In taking emply fears.
