THE U.S.A. A WORLD POWER

(Lord Bryce in "New Republic") Lord Bryce holds that America can only fulfil her destiny by taking some part in the world politics of the European Powers, a view diametrically opposed to that of the founders of the Republic. It is not intended to influence the policy of that country towards the present war, or indeed to any particular conjuncture.

Dealing with the circumstances in which Washington recommended a policy of rigid detachment from the political affairs of Europe, Lord Bryce proceeds: "Consider what those circumstances were. In Washington's day North America was distant from Europe by a voyage of some weeks, often of many weeks, and often perilous. American commerce with Europe was already important, but how small compared with our times! Very few persons went to and fro. News came slowly and what did come became imperfectly known to the American people. They could afford to think little and care little about Europe, not only because their relations, personal and commercial, were comparatively slender, but also because they were then and for two generations afterwards mainly occupied in colonizing their vast western territory and developing their own resources. They were moreover in Washington's day a population of only five millions.

"But at last things changed in Europe, and the revolutions of 1848 marked a decisive stage in the change. They have gone on changing fast since then, and the greatest change of all has been the extension of the power and influence of the leading civilized States beyond the boundaries of Europe; the whole world has now become one by the enormous development of trade due to new and swift means of transportation and communication, and by the interests which every country has in the weal or woe of every other country. Not only the directly commercial, but the financial relations of all civilized countries are closely interwoven; wars affect the trade and the welfare generally of neutrals more than ever before; capital has become so great a power, and capital in one country is so interlocked with capital in another, that whatever affects it anywhere affects it everywhere. No country escapes this influence, and the United States can escape it as little as any because it is the wealthiest of all.

"Moreover, the range of offensive warlike action has been immensely enlarged; every State has now become the neighbor of every other for evil as well as for good. Were an aggressive and ambitious military and naval Power, restrained by no scruples, disposed to embark on a policy of conquest overseas at the expense of weaker nations, she could do nothing in the days of Washington's day. She was in England used till lately to set down as mere 'pipe dreams' the fears that such an aggressive European Power would threaten such countries as Brazil or Argentina, but we must now confess ourselves mistaken. Neither of those countries nor the islands of the West Indies would be safe from attack were the other Powers which possess navies, and would be interested in checking aggression, unable to intervene. Supposing their navies got out of the way, the field would be clear.

"Lastly, there is another way in which the position of the United States has been entirely changed. She now numbers more than twenty times the population of Washington's day. She has become a great Power to which the world looks as the strongest and most impartial exponent of neutral opinion. The United States stands in an especial degree for the principles of international justice and international law. It has done more than any other nation to advocate the substitution of arbitration for war, and to improve the rules and assert the value of the principles of public law as governing international relations. Less than ever before can the United States view with an indifferent eye the conflict, wherever in the world it may be waged, for principles which it has done so much to promote, principles intertwined with its own life and growth. Its greatness and history alike impose on it a unique responsibility. Were Washington alive now would he not recognize such a responsibility? He certainly could not longer say in the words of his message, 'Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none or a very remote relation.'

"This brings me back to the point where we started. Have not the changes of 120 years so altered the relations of North America to Europe as to make some lines of action right or even necessary now which would have been in called for, and even dangerous, in 1796? These are submitted to general considerations. Of their applicability to the present or any other specific crisis it is not for me to speak. No sensible man on this side of the Atlantic would venture upon matters which are entirely for the judgment of the Government and people of the United States. The more any one knows of the conditions under which the Executive and Congress have to act, and the complicated facts they have to weigh, the less would he presume to offer advice. "But there is one point upon which a word may be said, because it relates not to the present conjuncture or to that treaty settlement when the war ends, which the belligerent Powers, whoever they may then be, will have to make, but to the further and subsequent question: What is to be done after the settlement has been reached and completed? This is a matter on which European Powers are entitled to address their American friends, inviting their co-operation in a work to be done hereafter for the benefit of the world. All thoughtful men, both in Britain and, as we are told, in the United States, also feel that some effort must be made to provide machinery calculated to prevent the recurrence of such a frightful calamity as this war has proved to be. "The difficulties of such a scheme are obvious. But they need not be insuperable, with the co-operation of the United States, which would bring to any concerted plan for the amicable settlement of disputes and for the maintenance of peace by a League to restrain aggression, its authority, its strength, and that disinterestedness which belongs to its position outside the circle of European jealousies. Here is an undertaking which the changes of the last 70 years have made a matter of common concern to every part of the world. No great nation, whatever its maxims of policy have hitherto been, can, if it approves the end in view, stand aloof from the efforts to attain that end, now more than ever urgent. Here is a service in which the United States is called upon to join because it is to be rendered to mankind at large, to the New World as well as to the Old."

REMEMBER AFTER 54 YEARS

Governor John Miller of the Grey county jail, who has held the position continuously since 1862, when he succeeded his father, has resigned his position, to take effect at once. For some months he has been confined to his room through illness. Fifty-four years is a long term of service, and in Governor Miller's case, a service well rendered. What an experience Mr. Miller must have had in the past half century, what strange and deplorable characters he must have seen, what outlaws found shelter at times within his castle walls! The position was no insecure, and certainly not the most desirable.

HAMPDEN.

Mrs. Weulling of Detroit is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Little. Rev. W. I. McLean is visiting the Hampden congregation. The Hampden ball players intend playing a game against the Knox team on Tuesday of this week. Mr. John Cooper took three carloads of choice fat cattle to Toronto last week. Mr. Cooper is quite a progressive farmer. The members of the Woman's Missionary Society last Sunday presented Mrs. Alister Anderson with a handsome Bible. The address, read by Miss Jennie Cooper, was as follows: To Mrs. A. Anderson, Hampden. Dear Friend,—We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society feel that we cannot allow you to leave us, without expressing in some way, our regret at your removal and our particular loss as a society. Since the organization of our auxiliary you have been a most devoted and enthusiastic worker. Your time, energy and enthusiasm, you willingly and conscientiously gave to the Master in this branch of His work. The Hampden church, Bible class and choir will miss you greatly, and we feel that your place in our little mission circle will be hard to fill. We wish for you and Mr. Anderson in your new home much happiness and the highest success. May your severance of church ties here be simply a transfer to even greater and more consecrated service in your new sphere of work. As a little parting gift we would ask you to accept this Bible. May it serve as a simple reminder of your former co-workers in the little missionary society in Hampden. "The Lord keeps watch between us Keeps watch in tenderest love, Until our praises mingle Around the throne above." Signed on behalf of the Hampden auxiliary of the W.M.S., Hanover, June 18, 1916. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson left on the afternoon C.P.R. train on Tuesday. They intend stopping at some of the large points on their journey, and will arrive at their home at Medicine Hat on the 26th of June. We wish them success and happiness in their new home.

CO. NO. 1 GIRL GUIDES REPORT FROM NOVEMBER TO JUNE

Early in November, 1915, Co. No. 1, Girl Guides, was reorganized. Besides taking up the regular Guide work, this Company has been doing as much as possible for patriotic purposes. A carnival, and two sales of baking were held, and, in addition, the girls are busy with an autograph quilt. The proceeds of these were used for Red Cross supplies, as follows: Sent to Can. Red Cross... $50.00 Mrs. McPhedran, Toronto, for needy French... 20.00 Canadian Red Cross Society: 62 pairs socks, 44 towels, 27 face cloths. Proceeds already on hand from quilt, $21.55. This is to be used entirely for patriotic work. A supply of wool is also on hand to use in knitting during the summer. The officers and members of this Company wish to thank all those in the surrounding country, who have so kindly assisted them during the past term.

HAVE YOU A BAD SORE?

If so, remember these facts—Zam-Buk is by far the most widely used balm in Canada! Why has it become so popular? Because it heals sores, cures skin diseases, and does what is claimed for it. Why not let it heal your sore? Remember that Zam-Buk is altogether different to the ordinary ointments. Most of these consist of animal fats. Zam-Buk contains no trace of any animal fat, or any mineral matter. It is absolutely herbal. Remember that Zam-Buk is at the same time healing, soothing, and antiseptic. Kills poison instantly and all harmful germs. It is suitable alike for recent injuries and diseases, and for chronic sores, ulcers, etc. Test how different and superior Zam-Buk really is. All druggists and stores at 50c box. Use also Zam-Buk Soap. Relieves sunburn and prevents freckles. Best for baby's bath. 25c. tablet
