A PROPHECY.

The price of Fords has been cut to $360.—United States news item. They soon will be as thick as flies. On summer cottage apple pies. They'll be as cheap as hairpins and as quick to go astray. The grocer on the job and wise. Will casually advertise: "This is the place to buy your Fords—we get 'em fresh each day."

The wives will order 'em by phone. The baby have one of his own. To cut his little teeth upon the hickory steering wheel; The Standard Oil—considered mean. Will give 'em with its gasoline. And pile up dividends upon its profits from the deal. The streets will be alive with them. A swarming, teeming hive with them.

The woman who comes up to wash. Our clothes each week (this is no josh). Will drive her Henry to the door and park it on the lawn. The tramp that begged his daily board. Will ask for our discarded Ford. And grumble if it's not equipped. With starter, lights and horn. The kids will go to school with them. Will tinker and will fool with them.

They will be used as favors. By the women at their teas; No church or lodge will raffle 'em; There is no way to baffle 'em. The town will be as thick with 'em. As Fido is with fleas.

The time will come when man can give. A Ford to every relative, And let 'em drive themselves about.

And serve their own desires, And in that happy period, then. We all can be contented when. The most expensive thing about. The car will be the tires. And who can tell when comes the day.

When Fords are almost given away. And everybody owns the car. So widely used and joshed. Upon the streets there may be seen.

King Constantine of Greece and his family. The King, who is reported to have abdicated in favor of the Crown Prince, who is beside him. The "power behind the throne," Queen Sophia, is a sister of Kaiser Wilhelm.

A Ford that's spick and span and clean. And shows some signs of having been Occasionally washed. —Edgar A. Guest.

It is a good idea to reduce the week-end work by preparing early in the week a large cake of the kind that will keep, and a jar of cookies.

Every man has certain rights in this world, but most of them, after all, aren't worth being disagreeable about.

GILLIE BECOMES RICH

Young Scotchman Has Romantic, Busy Career on Stage

A remarkable romance of the film is related in a film paper. In 1909 a nobleman leased several thousand acres of land for shooting in the Scottish Highlands. There he became acquainted with a Scotch gillie, whom he liked so much that he persuaded him to accompany him back to London at the end of the shooting season. The gillie was really only a boy of eighteen, and the nobleman decided to have him educated. Treated as a friend by his patron, the Scotch boy, Donald Mackenzie, enjoyed all advantages, and it was ultimately discovered that he had a splendid baritone voice, which made him much in demand in society drawing rooms. One day a prominent theatrical man heard him, and offered him an operatic engagement at Daly's Theatre to play the part of Lord Encheater in "The Country Girl." He accepted, and was so successful that the late Augustin Daly engaged him to play the part in the United States.

Other engagements followed, and Mr. Mackenzie at last got his big chance. He had made it a rule to understudy every big part to which he was suited. One night he was playing in "When Johnny Came Marching Home," when Mr. W. T. Carleton, who was playing the General, was seized with heart failure in the biggest scene and had to leave the stage. Quick as a flash Mr. Mackenzie shot to the front, took up the part where it had been broken off and, to the amazement of the company, finished playing the part without a single error. The next day Mr. Carleton showed his gratitude by raising Mr. Mackenzie's salary and giving him the part. A lasting friendship sprang up between the two, and when Mr. Mackenzie began producing picture plays, at which he is making $15,000 a year, he gave Mr. Carleton a big part in his fine photo-play, "The Pardon."

IT PAYS TO PROTECT

Forests, Well-cared-for, Mean Big Canadian Industries

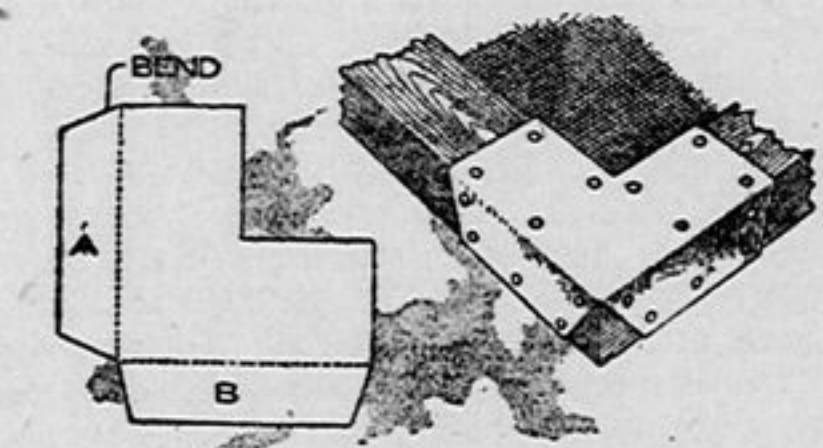

No lumberman gets a dollar bill out of a felled tree until he has spent three other dollars for labor and supplies. That is, the workman, together with the food, clothing, hardware and other manufacturers and dealers have three shares in the profits to the lumberman's one. If the man working the limits does not first advance the worker and the supply-man their part of the cash, the wood operations come to a standstill and the whole investment may be thrown away.

Look this over! $40,000,000 a year are paid out in wages in the making of timber and its manufacture in Canada. Investors have backed Canadian forest industries with over $260,000,000 of capital. 110,000 men get their livelihood from living forests. A dead forest means a dead paysheet. Where do these men live? One hundred and fifty of them and their families are in a little town. Have you seen the coopers and box mill, the boat works and the saw mill? There are 3,500 of them on the payroll of a single firm in Ottawa during an average season. Look over your own town. See what would happen if wood supplies suddenly ceased. Count the mills and the workmen affected.

THE OLDEST FLAG

If the question was asked which country's national flag has been longest in use, the answer would be either the dragon banner of China or the chrysanthemum flag of Japan. The former has been used from a very early period, and the latter is as old as the present dynasty in Japan, which is the most ancient in the world. Amongst European national flags that of Denmark, a white St. George's cross on a red ground, is the most ancient, having been in use since 1219. No other flag has existed without change for anything like the same period as a national emblem, although there are Royal Standards that are older. The Spanish colors date only from 1785, and the British flag, in its present form, was first flown after the union with Ireland in 1801. The Stars and Stripes of the United States is older than Britain's, for it was first planned and ordered by Washington of an upholsterer in Philadelphia, and formally adopted on June 14th, 1777.

Repairing Window Screens

An old broken fly-screen frame was made quite rigid with the use of metal braces, cut as shown and fastened with nails to each corner. The brace was cut from sheet metal, and the edges A and B were cut and bent at right angles to the main part, with their extreme edges bent over the frame. These were sufficient to make the frame as rigid as a new one.—From Popular Mechanics.

THRIFT MEANS DETAILS

Canada Needs New Quality, if She Becomes Great

A writer in the Canadian Tatler says: What is thrift? To my mind, thrift to Canada to-day is what Preparedness means to the Americans, at the present moment. It is an essential factor in our national life. The Government has recognized this prime essential, by carrying on an extensive campaign with the idea of educating Canadians. Good as the educational campaign along this line has been it has lacked the first essentials that make for success. Thrift begins with the little things in the daily routine of our living.

It was the late Sir William Van Horne, that rugged Canadian with the sane ideas of life, who told an interviewer that "success in life means spending one dollar, if you only earn two dollars." With this as the fundamental idea must we begin to instill thrift into Canadians as a people. Canada may be likened unto the young man who has sown his wild oats. As a young nation Canada has "had its fling." It is just about time we Canadians decided to settle down if we are to become great in a world sense. With a saner plane of living established for our plain people, the foundation of the Dominion may be considered to have been constructed with strength.

Summer resorts are places where people go to rise at 4 a.m. and stay up until 1 a.m. to do nothing.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

Sprinkle clothes with the garden hose while hanging on the line. Bath sponges should be hung out in hot sunshine as often as possible. If a bay leaf is added to tomato soup it will give it a delightful flavor. A soapstone griddle, like an iron spider, requires long service to season it. Shoes should be well sunned and aired, and several pairs should be kept in use. In cleaning painted woodwork it is better to use a strong kerosene water than any kind of soap. A lump of camphor placed near silverware that is not in use will prevent it from tarnishing. If you use whole spices, tied in a bag, to flavor your catsup, it will be bright and clear in color. A shortwaist box stood on end and fitted with shelves makes a good little cupboard to hold hats. A six pound electric iron is the best to choose for laundry work, because it holds the heat longer. A little jar of salad helps out a school child's lunch greatly. Choose the jars with covers that screw on. Barley water for children should be made with one teaspoonful of prepared barley flour and one and one-half cups of water. Boil 20 minutes. Another remedy for grass stains is cream of tartar dissolved in boiling water. Apply when the spot is fresh, and then wash as usual.
