GERMAN U-BOAT SINKS SIX SHIPS

Germany Violates Pledge-Passenger Steamer and Five Freighters Torpedoed off Massachusetts Coast

Lying off Nantucket Sunday afternoon, where every liner leaving or entering this port must get her bearings, the German submarine U-53, aided probably by one or two other war submersibles, torpedoed and sank six ships. Four of them were British, one passenger carrier. The other two were neutrals-one Dutch and the other Norwegian; an American steamship was held up, but was allowed to proceed. Admiral Knight, commander of the naval station at Newport, says that the Nantucket Lightship reported a second German submarine nearby.

One Day's Record The record of submarine warring, as brought to land by wireless despatches, follows:

The Strathdene, British freighter, torpedoed and sunk off Nantucket, crew taken aboard Nantucket Shoals lightship and later removed to Newport by torpedo-boat destroyers. The vessel left New York Saturday for Bordeaux, and was attacked at 6 a.m.

The Westpoint, British freighter, torpedoed and sunk off Nantucket Crew abandoned the ship in small boats after a warning shot from the Bubmarine's gun. Officers and men were taken aboard a destroyer. The vessel was attacked at 10.45 a.m. She was bound from London to Newport News.

Captain Wilson's Statement "My ship was attacked without warning," declared Captain Wilson, after he had given a detailed statement of the incident to the British consul-general. "Thirteen shots were fired before we left the vessel. None of the shot, however, struck the ship until we had taken to the boats." Under instructions from the consulgeneral, Captain Wilson declined to give out further information. Consular officials said Captain Wilson's report first would have to be forwarded to the British mbassador at Washingbefore they could discuss the sinking of the Strathdone.

Members of the Strathdene's crew said that after they had pulled away from their ship, they saw the submarine approach the oil steamer Christian Knudsen, whose crew seemed to be getting ready to lower their boats. The submarine then returned and torpedoed the Strathdene and again steamed toward the oil ship and apparently replenished her oil tanks. Several torpedo boats were in the vicinity, the sailors said, when the two ships were sunk. Officers of the rescuing ship asserted the Strathdene's officers told them that the submarine was made fast to the tanker for three-quarters of an hour, taking oil, before the vessel was sunk Strathdene, told on board the P.L.M. No. 4, by the rescued crew, corroborated Capt. Wilson's statement that his ship was fired on before the officers and crew got into the boats. Capt. Yates of the P.L.M. No. 4 said Capt. Wilson told him that when the submarine came alongside, eight or ten officers, including Capt. Rose of the U-53, boarded the Strathdene. "Capt. Rose ordered him to abandon ship immediately," Capt. Yates said Capt. im. 'The two boats were lowered and the submarine commander gave structions for reaching Nantucket lightship, ordering us to row as fast as possible. As we pulled away the submarine fired four more shots at her, which struck above the waterline." The oil steamer just then hove in sight and the submarine headed for her, afterward returning to torpedo the Strathdene.

The passengers agreed that 36 shots were fired at the Stephano before she was torpedeed and sunk. Mrs. Chas. W. Bostwick of Hudson, N.Y., who was returning from Nova Scotia, said eight minutes elapsed between the pubmarine's first and second shots, then the captain ordered everybody to take to the lifeboats. She said the officers did everything to help the passengers and assist them to put on life preservers.

CANADA BOND ISSUE FOR SMALL INVESTORS

Denominations From $10 Up With Interest of Approximately Fve Per Cent.

In a statement issued by the Finance Department announcing the satisfactory conditions of Dominion trade and revenue, and urging on the public individual thrift as well as individual effort to increase the production of wealth, the announcement is made that opportunity will shortly be given for the investment of small savings in Dominion debenture stock. It is understood that the Government intends to offer bonds of denominations from ten dollars up, which can be purchased through the banks, and on which an interest of approximately five per cent. will be earned, redeemable in five years. The subscriptions to the last two war loans for two hundred million dollars have in the main come from the larger investors, in amounts of a thousand dollars or upwards. The issue of the bonds of small denominations is designed to attract investment for several hundred thousand men and women who have comparatively small amounts to invest in something that will be both safe and patriotic. This scheme has already been adopted with surprising success in England, where purchasers of Government bonds from one pound sterling up get 41/2 per cent. interest on their money.

John Redmond Comes Out Strong Against Conscription

British newspapers in commenting upon John Redmond's speech attacking the plan to extend conscription to Ireland, sounded warnings. "If anybody seriously believed that the Irish Nationalist party could be driven or cajoled into acceptance of conscription in Ireland that belief must now be dead," says the Daily

The Telegraph says that the speech shows no trace of loftiness and that the speaker never got away from the narrow bounds of Irish politics.

The Chronicle called the speech a powerful effort, adding: "It is the voice of a man who knows his own mind and it rises clear above the doubts and uncertainties of the chaotic Irish tangle, amid a babel of conflicting counsels. It reiterates his old message 'stand firmly by the constitutional movement."

The Times refuses to enter into a controversy but says: "We have the right to, on the strength of his (Redmond's) own declarations, to ask him to prove his words true."

The Daily Mail says that prominent members of the Cabinet have come to favor a very strong campaign for voluntary recruiting in Ireland, instead of establishing conscription there. If this is done, it is likely that a definite figure will be announced as the minimum number of men to be secured
